MILLIONAIRE'S STUDENT SON QUESTIONED IN FRANKS CASE

Youth, Interrogated All Night Regarding Glasses, Says He Lost Them
When Studying Birds.

HIS FRIENDS ASKED
AS TO MOVEMENTS

Typewriters and Letters Taken by Police in Investigation of Kidnaping and Murder.

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, May 28.—Nathan E.
Leopold Jr., 19-year-old student and son of a millionaire financier, questioned for hours early today, said he believed the spectacles found near the spot where the body of Robert Franks, 13-year-old son of a millionaire, kidnaped May 21, was found, were his and that he lost them while on a bird study expedition. The body was found in a railroad culvert and the glasses were found some distance away.

"I don't blame the police for holding me," Leopold said. "I was out near the culvert on Saturday and Sunday before the body was found and it is quite probable I lost my glasses out there." He explained that he could establish his alibi and that he did not know the Franks boy although he knew of the family by reputation.

Interested in Ornithology.
Young Leopold has long been interested in ornithology and has written for ornithological publications. Richard Loeb, son of another millionaire, and Richard J. Robel, friends of young Leopold, also were questioned concerning Leopold although no suspicion was directed toward them.

From an optical company the police learned that the prescription for the glasses would fit those sold to Leopold.

Leopold said that he had gone to the swampy prairie perhaps 50 times on bird study trips. He said he had not worn glasses frequently and did not know what had happened to his. Leopold is said to be a brilliant student and says he is familiar with six or seven languages.

The police have taken typewriters belonging to Leopold and also Loeb, and their private letters, for examination.

Shown the letter signed "George Johnson" and demanding a ransom of $10,000 of Jacob Franks for his son, and asked if he could have written such a correctly constructed letter, Leopold said he might have written a better one as he noticed kidnapping was spelled "Kidnaping."

Leopold explained his movements on May 21, the day of the disappearance of the Franks boy, saying he left his university classroom at 11 a. m. in company of young Loeb and they spent the afternoon in Lincoln Park looking for birds.

After dining in the evening, he said, they invited two young boys billionaire girls who also left the car in Jackson Park. He said he was at home by 11 o'clock. Loeb, the police say, corroborated Leopold's statement, except to say that he went to his home after dinner and knew nothing of the ride with the girls.

The theory that the Franks boy was the victim of others than kidnapers interested in the demanded ransom and killed accidentally still is held by some detectives working on the case.

Six Other Arrests Made.
Three women and a man were arrested in an apartment last night by detectives. The found a small portable typewriter and a quantity of paper similar to that on which the ransom demand was written.

Mrs. Margaret Wolfe, Miss Margaret Smith of Cleveland, Porter G.
Ellis and the latter's wife, and Miss Jean Mason were held for questioning by the police while Wolfe and Smith are held in Indianapolis. The only occasion for their interrogation, the police said, is that Wolfe drives a gray car of the kind believed to have been used by the kidnapers. There is no definite suspicion against any of them, according to the police, who said also that no importance now is attached to the acts of Charles T. Heath, former druggist, in taking drugs and vanishing from the city. Heath now is in Louisville, Ky.

DUCAL ESTATE OF $100,000,000 HANGS UPON ONE WORD

If Treaty Meant "Royal," Frederick Loses; if It Meant
"Reigning," He Wins.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch,
and New York World.
LONDON, May 28.—Upon the interpretation of one word in the peace treaties of the Trianon and St. Germaine, with Austria and Hungary, hangs the disposition of an estate worth more than £20-000,000, normally nearly $100,000-000.

An American syndicate, which includes Frank A. Munsey and Charles H. Sabin, of the Guarantee Trust Co., is heavily interested in the estate. The property was left in the estate of the archduke formerly of Austria and he contends it still is. His estates in Czechoslovakia, Jugoslavia, Poland, Italy and other places are being held by the Governments under the treaties.

The treaties provide for the confiscation of all the property of certain royalties. The French version declares the estates of members of the "reigning family" shall be taken. The English text uses the expression "royal family."
The archduke contends the French text is the correct one and the term "reigning" applied only to the Emperor and his immediate family and heirs, which would exclude Frederick, who is only a cousin. He admits he would be included under the English version of "royal family."

The treaty of the Trianon declares both texts shall be official but in case of differences, the French text shall be binding. This strengthens the archduke's claims.
These tribunals consisting of one judge from each country and a third selected by the two, have been set up. The archduke's claim has already been filed with the court established for Czechoslovakia and will be filed with that of Jugoslavia.

JUDGE BAGBY ACQUITTED ON PLEA OF SELF-DEFENSE

Probate Judge at Fayette, Mo., Fired by Jury in Case of Man Slain in Courthouse.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.
FAYETTE, Mo., May 28.—Probate Judge David Bagby, 66 years old, presiding in the Howard County Probate Court, was acquitted by a jury here last night of a charge of second degree murder in the fatal shooting of his business associate, John M. Taylor, a wealthy farmer.

They had quarreled in Judge Bagby's private office Dec. 28 last, with no witnesses present and the door locked. Judge Bagby, taking the stand in his own defense, testified that he had shot to save himself after Taylor had said, "I'm going to beat the life out of you right now." The judge is in feeble health, having suffered several paralytic strokes. He had to be assisted to the stand.

The State sought to show that Judge Bagby had owed Taylor $3000 on a note, which Taylor kept among other private papers in the judge's office. The note disappeared, according to the prosecution, and Taylor believed Judge Bagby had destroyed it. This was the cause of the quarrel.

COURT REWARDS WOMAN AUTHOR AFTER 12 YEARS

Mrs. Grace Fendler's Claim That "Bird of Paradise" Was Plagiarism Is Upheld by Judge.

PLAY WAS MOROSCO'S EARLIEST SUCCESS

Accounting Expected to Show Earnings Since Play Was Put On of More Than $2,000,000.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, May 28.—For 12 years Mrs. Grace A. Fendler has cherished the belief that her fame as a Broadway playwright was stolen by Richard Walton Tully when he wrote "The Bird of Paradise."

Yesterday in Supreme Court Justice Erlanger decided that Mrs.
Fendler's belief should prevail and that the receipts of the play since it opened belong to her.

She made only one previous attempt to assert herself, in 1912, when the play opened here as a great success. It introduced Harlow to New York. "Romance in new and fascinating surroundings," one critic said.

After seeing the play Mrs. Fen-dler went to the United States District Court and told Judge Mayer how she had submitted a Hawaiian play to Oliver Morosco in Los Angeles in 1910. She called it "In Hawaii." She believed he must have shown it to Tully, because "The Bird of Paradise" resembled her rejected play, she said, and Morosco was producing it for Tully.

Judge Mayer refused to stop the play, but explained to Mrs. Fen-dler that she might assemble her proofs of plagiarism and bring suit.
He said she would lose nothing by waiting if the play were a success.

Gross Receipts $2,000,000.
The Bird of Paradise had an exceptionally long run in New York and established Tully as a playwright and Morosco as a producer in the East. The play still is running in stock, and Mrs. Fendler understands the gross receipts during 12 years have been about $2,000-000. She has no clear idea of the amount she may recover under the court ruling.

Meantime Tully has written such successes as "Omar the Tent Maker" and "The Flame," and has explained repeatedly he is a producer "who believes in giving young authors a chance."

Meantime also Mrs. Fendler, in a California town, gradually saved enough money to bring suit for what she believes are her rights.

She is a slight, alert little woman with graying hair and kindly eyes who seems less grieved by the loss of fame and money than by the "wrong done by those two gentlemen." She might make no attempt even now to take her money if it were not, as she says, "for the sake of my son." He is just graduating from Harvard, after working his way through.

She has written nothing much since her Hawaiian play because she "always had that to worry about." Yesterday her worries seemed to be ended.

After a two weeks' trial in the equity division, Supreme Court Justice Erlanger handed down an interlocutory decree declaring her entitled to a full account of all the earnings of the play, "The Bird of Paradise."

The law of plagiarism provides that if any ideas are stolen, the ownership of the whole composition, in which they are used, passes to the owner of the stolen ideas.
"I'm so relieved that it's all over," Mrs. Fendler said afterward,
"that I feel weak and tired."

Appeal to Be Taken.
She did not know that House, Grossman and Voorhees, attorneys for Tully and Morosco, already had planned an appeal but she was show another court that there is a fatal flaw in her claim to authorship. The flaw lies in the inability of Mrs. Fendler to produce the submitted to Morosco in 1910 or a true copy of it.

She admitted the play which she submitted to the court in evidence was copied and recopied, but she said it was "substantially the same."

The defense then called attention to the fact that Mrs. Fendler made her first claim in 1912, two years after submitting her manuscript and immediately after seeing the Tully play. The defense wanted to know how much the Tully play might have influenced Mrs.

COOPER LEADS AT 400-MILE MARK

Closely Pressed by Murphy and Corum—140,000 See Contest—Tommy Milton
Quits After Mishaps.

By the Associated Press.
SPEEDWAY, INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 28.—Cooper hung on grimly to first place by seconds at 400 miles, but was being forced to increase his speed by Joe Boyer, relief driver for Corum. Corum's car had taken second place when Murphy stopped for a tire change.
Murphy was third. The leader's time was 4:04:22.43, an average of 98.21 miles an hour.

Eddie Hearne, A. A. A., driving champion last year, went out on his 150th lap with a broken gas line. He was in eleventh place when Frank Elliott went out in his 14th lap because of a broken gas tank.

By the Associated Press.
SPEEDWAY, INDIANAPOLIS,
Ind., May 28.—Earl Cooper hung on to the lead at 350 miles in the twelfth annual 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway today, with Jimmy Murphy less than a minute behind. L. L. Corum came charging along 1 minute and 25 seconds behind Murphy. Cooper's time was 3:34:16.49, an average of 95.01 miles an hour. This average was about four miles an hour better than the best previous track record for this distance.

Tommy Milton, last year's winner, after a day filled with trouble, retired in the 10th lap, when a gas tank support broke, for the second time.

When 200 miles had been run
Murphy was leading by virtue of Cooper's enforced stop for gas and oil. Cooper, however, snatched a victorious pace after his stop and remained in second place. Corum was still in third and Hill in fourth.
Murphy's time at 300 miles was 2:42:51.53, an average of 98.1-miles per hour.

Cooper regained the lead when Murphy made a brief stop in his 120th lap for gas and oil.

Ford Issues a Statement.
It was announced that Henry Ford, who is referee of the race, had made a gift to every race driver in the form of accident insurance, each of the 22 pilots being insured for $10,000.

When the race was half completed Ford issued a statement that today's contest proved "what we already knew—that every individual in America is interested in the automobile."

The statement follows:
"The race proves beyond a doubt what we already knew—that every individual in America is interested in the automobile.
This race, the great motor car classic of America, seems to be the climax of motor contests in the public mind."

One Driver Slightly Hurt.
Despite the fast pace maintained, only one car was out of the race at the half-way point. This was Ernie Ansterberg's car, which skid-ded and turned over on the first lap. The driver was only slightly injured, and participated in the race later as a relief driver.

Cooper's fast driving had netted him $3000 in lap prizes.

Following the three leaders, the next seven, in order, were: L. L.
Corum, Harry Hartz, Ira Vail, Eddie Hearne, Antoine Mourre and Jules Ellingboe and Fred Comer.

Cooper Makes Brief Stop.
Cooper, riding as if the luck charms supplied him by race fans throughout the country had brought him fortune, led when the half-way mark was passed. He was pressed closely, however, by Hill and Murphy, who were in the same lap with him and in second and third position, respectively.

Cooper's time for the 250 miles was 2:31:51.53, an average of 98.78 miles an hour. The best previous average time for 250 miles was made in 1921, when it was 24:02 miles an hour.

Cooper was compelled to make his first stop in the one hundred and fifth lap. Murphy then took the lead with Hill in second place.
Cooper was away again in one minute and 35 seconds, amid the crowd's cheers.

Cooper, driving at better than 100 miles an hour, swept into the

'DEATH RAY' IS OLD STUFF.
SAY BRITISH AIR EXPERTS

They Declare They Can Do Everything Grindell-Matthews Has Done So Far.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch
and New York World.
LONDON, May 30.—Under Air Secretary Leach yesterday told the House of Commons every phenomenon demonstrated to Air Ministry experts by Harry Grindell-Matthews with his "death ray" can be reproduced by the experts themselves. This statement considerably reduced newspaper and parliamentary excitement over the ray and its inventor's flight to Paris.

When he demonstrated his invention last month he stopped a motor cycle engine at a distance of 15 yards with the ray. This was done for the Government experts, but physicists say it is not new, that Nicola Tesla did similar feats years ago, and unless Grindell-Matthews has something up his sleeve his results are without practical value.

The general impression today is that Grindell-Matthews has hoaxed
the public by his dramatic threats to sell the ray to France will not result in real money until he has successfully performed tests which he has refused to attempt in England.

Mellon Meets Means Story.
WITH DISDAINFUL STATEMENT Says If Senators Give Any Credence to Charges They Undoubtedly Will Call Him for Facts.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, May 31.—The testimony of Gaston M. Means yesterday before the Senate committee was received with cool disdain by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon.

Means, in including his direct testimony, made the direct charge that Mellon had admitted to Capt.
H. L. Scaife, war fraud investigator, that he had entered into an arrangement for the issuance of warrants for the returns for which were to be used to pay off the deficit of the Republican National Committee.

Mellon caused the following statement to be issued by the Treasury Department:
"Mr. Mellon said the irresponsible testimony of Means before the Wheeler committee is too absurd to deserve notice. Some months ago I was subpoenaed by the committee but have not yet been asked to appear. If the committee gives any credence to Means story it will undoubtedly call on me for the facts."

PRESIDENT REJECTS PLAN TO CHANGE WORLD COURT; FIRM FOR HUGHES PROPOSAL

Principals in Russell Divorce Case

The Hon. John Russell, his wife, Christobel, and her child.

RUSSELL DIVORCE VERDICT SET ASIDE

House of Lords Grants Wife's Appeal in Famous "Dream Baby" Case.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.
LONDON, May 30.—The House of Lords today quashed the decree of divorce granted to the Hon.
John Russell, son and heir of Lord
Amphill, from his wife, Christobel
Russell, on grounds of infidelity.
Mrs. Russell's appeal was granted.
Russell had named a man whose identity was not revealed. The committee of the House of Lords that investigated the case said that Mrs. Russell had not lived together as man and wife could not be received under the English law.
Therefore, the committee argued,
no evidence of infidelity could properly have gone before the jury.

The House adopted Lord Birkenhead's motion to the effect that the court findings that she was guilty of misconduct with an unknown man, alleged to be the father of her child, called a "dream baby," and the consequent decree of divorce could not stand.

Mrs. Russell's claim that her husband was a somnambulist was a novel feature of the case that has caused it to be widely followed.

The Russell divorce, which brought up the question of the paternity of Mrs. Russell's child, was one of the most sensational ever heard in the British divorce court.
It attracted widespread attention throughout all Europe and America.

After Russell denied being the father of his wife's child, counsel for Mrs. Russell sought to prove through a comparison of physical features that Russell was really the father.

Russell had named two co-respondents who were identified and one who was not. On July 22, 1922, a jury found Mrs. Russell not guilty of illicit relations with the two identified men but failed to agree regarding the unidentified man. This action at first was called a mistrial and another was held in the divorce court last year, when Russell won. The trial was carried through the Court of Appeals to the House of Lords. Russell is the heir to Lord Amphill.

ADVANCED VIEWS GIVEN IN DEFENSE OF BISHOP BROWN

Attorney Contends Original

Present Mental Processes.

"CHURCH DOCTRINES NOT CONTROVERTED"

Contention for Teachings and Writings of Defendant Before Episcopal Court of Bishops.

CLEVELAND, O., May 30.—The modernistic doctrines of the most advanced type were introduced today in the trial of Bishop William M. Brown before the Protestant Episcopal court of bishops. They came when Joseph S. Sharts, Dayton attorney for the accused, read an outline of the defense and again when his first witness was ruled out on objections from the church advocate, but the attorney was allowed to read into the record what he wished the witness to bring out.

The defense opened after the court, by a ruling under common law, had shut off debate on an overruled motion to dismiss the charge for want of evidence.

Sharts maintained in his opening that the doctrines of the church had in no way been controverted by the teachings and writings of his client.

He said that these were based not only on the doctrine relied upon by the church advocate, but on all tenets of the church, teachings of its leaders from the beginning and on the entire Bible.

"The question at issue was not what Bishop Brown believes, but how he believes it, and that the church has never defined the quality of belief but only the quantity."

Sharts said the defense would show that belief was a mental process and that only in recent years had that process been discovered by the researches of psychologists and psychoanalysts.

Carrying out this latter idea, he called as first witness for the defense Theodore Schroeder of Cos Cob, Conn., who described himself as an expert in these mental sciences.

Sharts, arguing against the objection to this testimony, said he would show that mind was capable of two forms of belief, subjective and objective. In subjective, he said, primitive man jumped there and his confusion was typical of the "child mind" of today, both individually and racially.

"This child mind," he stated, could not distinguish between dreams and waking impressions and its confusion extended to the true meanings of words.

Meanings of Creeds.
He said the original meanings of the creeds and many words in the Bible could not be reproduced by present mental processes, that each individual gets his own mental picture of a word according to his race, age, environment and early teaching.

"There is no possible way of getting two people to get the same mental picture of any word, no matter if they are of the same race or age," he said, "because time, place, environment and early teaching are not possible. To get such exact agreement between persons would be a greater miracle than any recorded in Holy Scripture."

Third Century Concepts.
Sharts said the defense would prove that in the third century the word "God" gave an impression of a bearded man in the sky, seated upon a throne and separated from earth by the clouds, how he appeared through which angels descended and ascended by trap doors. He drew an analogy between the change from this concept, applying it to all church doctrines, and asserting that it was not possible to reproduce in modern minds the same meaning of the words of the creeds which those words carried to the men who wrote them in Greek or Latin 1600 years ago.

"The mental content of such phrases as 'God, the Father Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth,' or 'Jesus Christ, His Only Begotten Son,' or 'I, the Virgin Mary' or 'Rose Anselm From the Dead,' were vastly different then from what is given now," he said.

Historical Expert.
Besides Schroeder, the defense called the Rev. A. K. Whitham, former priest of the church in England and now rector of a parish in the diocese of Kentucky. He was qualifying as a historical expert when court adjourned for luncheon.

In his opening statement Sharts said that by the testimony of Mr. Whitham he would show that as early as the third century the leaders of the church were at odds on the literal or symbolic interpretation of church doctrine; that such early church had not attempted to say how its leaders should believe and that in England and America the right was still being exercised.

He expected to show by this witness that the accusers of Bishop Brown are attempting to fix upon

CLEVELAND, O., May 30.—In an effort to show that there exists no definite and authoritative statement of the doctrine of the Protestant Episcopal Church and that numerous passages in the Bible are not accepted in literal sense by the clergy themselves, the defense in the heresy trial of Bishop William Montgomery Brown under way here prepared a list of 408 questions and asked permission to submit more than 100. Bishops and clergymen to whom the questions would be propounded. The court denied the request. Following are some of the prepared questions:

"Wherein are the doctrines of the Protestant Episcopal Church set forth?"

"By whom were they determined and under what sanction set forth?"

"Do you accept and teach all the doctrines of the church?"

"Do all the Bishops of the church accept and teach the same doctrines?"

"In the belief in the resurrection of the body, as set forth in the Apostles' Creed, included in the essential doctrine?"

"What authority of the church has power to determine what part of the creed is to be taken literally and what part symbolically?"

"Is the statement (in Bishop Brown's book) that Jehovah and Jesus are forms of the sun myth contrary to the church doctrine?"

"If so, to what doctrine?"

"Is the account of the virgin birth of Jesus Christ, as set forth in the first chapter of Matthew, included in the church doctrine?"

"Do you believe and teach that monothelism originated with the Hebrews, or do you agree with Dr. Budge of the British Museum that monothelism first appeared in Egypt, established by Akhnaton?"

"Is it essential to doctrine that Jesus be regarded as literally performing miracles?"

"Do you yourself believe and teach the historic truth of all these miracles, and if not, by what rule do you determine which are authentic and which are not?"

"As to each of the following scriptures, please state whether it receives a literal or a symbolic interpretation in the doctrine of the church and on what authority the brains of the clergy a definite limit which, if carried out, will render the church a mockery."

He also announced that Colonel Emory Scott West, U. S. A., retired, of Oak Park, Ill., would be placed on the stand as an archaeologist to show the primitive sources of Christian doctrine, that in their primitive form they probably came from the sect of the Essenes, learned in the Lore of Krishna, and that in the temples of Thebes were portrayed the virgin birth of Annunak III, accompanied by adoration by the angel host and a visit of wise men.

Bishop Brown to Testify.
He said Bishop Brown himself would testify in order to show that his work and record entitled him to earnest and careful consideration. He said the aged defendant would tell how he came to write the book upon which the accusation is based, how he appeared in vain to the House of Bishops for consideration because many of them were in the same dilemma and how he at last harmonized his doubts with the teachings of the church.

The defendant, it was further announced, would testify that his book was written "not to destroy, but to show how it might believe in the church," and that he himself believed in every word of the Bible but exercised only an inalienable right in saying in his sense and by what mental process he did so believe.

Effort to Put ALL THE BISHOPS
ON STAND FAILS

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Special Correspondent of the CLEVELAND, May 30.—After nearly three days of tugging and sawing over technical questions, the case of Bishop William Montgomery Brown, on trial for heresy before a canonical court of the Protestant Episcopal Church, arrived yesterday at the taking of evidence. Within half an hour the evidence had presented and rested its case. Only one witness was called, and that was unprecedented. The evidence consisted entirely of excerpts from Bishop Brown's book, "Communism and Christianity."

Stirring incidents marked the your answer to each is based:

"That God made the world in six days and rested the seventh;"

"That Eve was made out of Adam's rib;"

"That the serpent talked with Eve;"

"That the Lord smelled a sweet savor;"

"That God came down to see the Tower of Babel and was alarmed lest its top reach to heaven;"

"That Lot's wife became a pillar of salt;"

"That Moses' rod became a serpent;"

"That God gave Moses the tablets of stone writ with the finger of God;"

"That God caused Balaam's ass to speak;"

"Samson and the Jawbone;"

"That Samson slew 1000 Philistines with the jawbone of an ass;"

"That God sent an angel to destroy Jerusalem but repented of the evil and stayed his hand;"

"That Jehovah prepared a dish to swallow Jonah and that Jonah was in the belly of the fish three days and nights and that when Jehovah spoke to the fish it cast Jonah out alive;"

"That Jesus was the child of Mary and the Holy Ghost;"

"That he was taken up to the top of a high mountain and tempted by the devil;"

"That he walked on the sea;"

"That Peter also walked on the sea until he became afraid;"

"That Jesus gave Peter the keys to heaven;"

"That hell is a place of fire that never shall be quenched;"

"That Jesus turned water into wine;"

"That he restored Lazarus to life when he had been dead four days;"

"That an earthquake opened the prison doors for Paul and Silas and broke their bonds;"

"That four angels standing on the four corners of the earth;"

The trial court ruled that the opinion of the clergy concerning the doctrine of the church was not competent testimony, on the ground that the court itself would determine the points of doctrine against which Bishop Brown is accused of erring.

Most important of those was the court's refusal to let the defense submit the late Episcopal Bishops in the United States to the witness stand for the purpose of questioning them on their respective beliefs touching church doctrine. This was the severest blow thus far suffered by the defense, and prevented what undoubtedly would have been the most disturbing episode in the church's history. Instead, it vastly shortened the trial.

To a large degree the defense had based its hopes, both moral and legal, upon this plan. It intended thereby to show that a great conflict of opinion exists among the clergy themselves upon what constitutes the doctrine of the church, and that many of the Bishops are violently divided in their interpretations of the Scriptures and the creeds. On the basis of that showing it would have argued that doctrine being a matter of personal interpretation, Bishop Brown had as much right to his interpretation as the other Bishops have to theirs and that he could not be adjudged heretical merely because he differed more with the orthodox conception than his fellows.

Rules Laid Down by Court.
In rejecting the proposal, the court laid down some important rules which may become bones of serious contention in the church. One of these was the declaration that the general convention of the body and has sole authority in formulating its doctrines. Another was that the court does not keep the opinion of witnesses upon what constitutes doctrine, the latter being a subject of which the court takes "judicial notice" precisely as a civil court takes judicial notice of the statutes.

It told, however, that the church doctrine is contained in the Book of Common Prayer and the Apostles' and Nicene creeds, and that, while it is necessarily based upon the Scriptures, it is not formulated in them.

Church Advocate Charles L. Dibble, whose argument was largely accepted by the court in its decision, said that the legislative power of the general convention is so great that it could exclude the Apostles' Creed from the doctrine if it chose, even though the church committed suicide in so doing."

One Success for Defense.
Joseph Sharts, attorney for Bishop Brown, remarked that he believed "the Church Advocate" was trying to read the Scriptures out of the doctrine, and if he persuades the court to do so there will be a good many who will follow Bishop Brown out of the church. As I listened to him I wondered if I had not delayed my own departure too long."

In contrast to its continued reverses, the defense scored one notable success, its first of the trial, when Sharts compelled Dibble to name the specific points of doctrine against which Bishop Brown is accused of erring. The Church Advocate complied in detailed fashion by reading portions of the Book of Common Prayer and the two creeds, and declaring how each had been violated by the statements in the Bishop's book. This unquestionably will be the chief object of attack by the defense, which, taking each named article of doctrine singly, will argue that the alleged error was merely a question of personal interpretation.

A continuation had been requested by the defense Wednesday to take the depositions of Bishops and clergymen to the stand. The court ordered the defense to show what it expected to prove by these witnesses. Sharts furnished a list of more than 1000 names, including nearly all the Bishops in the country, as well as the Rev. Percy Stickney Grant, the Rev. Norman Guthrie and other modernist rectors, and set forth that he expected some of them to testify that no definite statement of doctrine exists, and that each member of the

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building,
WASHINGTON, May 30.—Both parties in a series of joint conferences have made an effort to reach an agreement that will permit adjournment of Congress next week. All efforts of compromise failed, but despite this, belief prevails among Democratic and Republican leaders that Congress will adjourn as planned.

In the Senate the Republicans and Democrats met together yesterday, but were unable to reach an understanding as to the form of compromise farm legislation that will be accepted. It was tentatively agreed that the Barkley bill providing for abolition of the Railway Labor Board will not be enacted.

On the inside cover appears a challenge from Bishop Brown to his fellow Bishops to bring him to trial for heresy, declaring that such a trial would bring more discredit upon their orthodoxy than upon his heterodoxy. He also suggests the outline of a cartoon, containing the figures of several "barking snarling dogs," to be labeled "the House of Bishops," surrounding the figure of a porcupine, to be labeled "Bishop Brown," displaying a formidable set of quills, to be designated as "Heresies," with the underline:

"Something that cannot safely be taken hold of."

As this description was read by Dibble the aged defendant laughed in evident enjoyment and several members of the court smiled broadly.

Such a cartoon does appear elsewhere in the book and it also was introduced in evidence by Dibble. He attempted to introduce the entire book, but a ruling of the court restricted him to the parts named. The prosecution then rested its case and Sharts moved that the case be dismissed. He was arguing the motion when adjournment came.

Sharts' Proposed Witnesses.
Indications multiplied yesterday that the court intends to go through the trial with all possible dispatch. Bishop Murray displayed some impatience with Sharts' dilatory tactics. Sharts said last night that he would put several witnesses on the stand.

One of these, Col. Emory Scott West, widely known for his scientific researches into the history of world religions, is expected to testify that the Christian system is an outgrowth and evolutionary product of several pagan systems which preceded it. He declares that his investigations, conducted principally in Egypt and Asia Minor, disclosed the existence, at various times, of at least 36 legends in which the central figure was a virgin-born god, of which 34 were traditionally reported to have been resurrected after death, 22 of them following crucifixion.

clergy interprets it according to his own conscience and wisdom. After a consultation which continued over the night, the court yesterday morning announced its rejection of the motion on the ground that the testimony would not be admissible if it were available, and ordered the trial to proceed.

Trying to Find the Doctrine.
"What doctrine is and whether it has been contravened, is not to be determined by witnesses, but by this court," Bishop Murray, the presiding judge, declared. The doctrine is fixed by the church in its corporate capacity and not by any individual. Doctrine cannot be ascertained by the examination of witnesses."

After he had added, in conclusion, that the doctrine is contained in the Book of Common Prayer and the two creeds, Sharts began to read at random from all three. When he had proceeded for some time Bishop Murray, in obvious bewilderment, asked his purpose.

"I'm trying to find the doctrine. You say it's in here somewhere, and I'm searching for it," was the reply. Bishop Murray and most of his seven associate judges joined wholeheartedly in the roar of laughter that greeted this sally, and Dibble volunteered to relieve Sharts of his quest by setting forth the specific articles against which the defendant is alleged to have erred.

Bishop Francis on Stand.
When the introduction of testimony was refused, Dibble said that the defense would stipulate that the defendant was a Bishop and that he had presided over the diocese of Arkansas prior to his retirement from active ministry. Evidently not in the mood to agree to anything, Sharts allowed that he would like to hear some testimony on the point, so Dibble placed on the stand Bishop Joseph Francis of Indianapolis, one of the three who brought the charges.

The witness testified he knew that Bishop Brown was a Bishop of the church, having seen him at a meeting of the House of Bishops, and knew that he formerly presided over the diocese of Arkansas. He identified a copy of "Communism and Christianity" as having been sent to him by the defendant, and produced the letter which, he said, accompanied it. A defense motion that all this testimony be stricken out as hearsay was denied.

Dibble then introduced as evidence the 23 quotations from the book named in the presentment against the defendant, as well as the front and back covers of the book, and a frontpiece bearing Bishop Brown's portrait. (These quotations were published in the Post-Dispatch yesterday.) One part of this exhibit showed the book to have passed through eight English editions, comprising a total of 125,000 copies, and to have appeared in several foreign languages.

MONUMENT UNVEILED TO JOHN MITCHELL

Farrington, Illinois Miners' Chief, Speaks on Career of Workers' Great Leader.

By the Associated Press.
SCRANTON, Pa., May 20.—President Frank Farrington of the Illinois Mine Workers' Union was the principal speaker here today at the unveiling of a monument to John Mitchell.

"John Mitchell and I were such close and intimate friends that I find it difficult adequately to express my admiration for his great character or to interpret it to those who may not have known him as well as I did," Farrington said. "We were born and brought up together; together we fought the miners' battle; together we went through the most trying circumstances.

"Such contacts are true tests of a man. I can say now that Mitchell's greatest asset was that of a simple, sterling honesty that shone through his every action. No man could look into the deep brown eyes of Mitchell and not feel an instant attraction for their owner. He was respected by the operators and adored by the miners. All his long life he kept his working class psychology. No matter how high he arose, he never forgot his miners' origin and he was never so happy as when he was with a group of miners.

Illinois His Birthplace.
"In Illinois, we are proud of the fact that our State was the birthplace of John Mitchell. He was born in Braidwood, and while he never held office in our State union, he was always most active in the work of organizing. He fought valiantly in the bitter strike at Spring Valley of which Henry Demarest, a great friend and admirer of Mitchell's wrote his fascinating book called 'The Strike of Millions Against Millions.' The conditions described in that book are in no way exaggerated. The men were faced with actual starvation but they persisted and today the State of Illinois is 100 per cent union.

"Of course Mitchell is best known for his work of organizing the great anthracite strike of 1902 and 1903. At the outset it seems as though his task were a hopeless one. The great companies that owned the mines were strongly entrenched.

They had ever available resource at their command. Mitchell had nothing but high courage and will to victory. The magnetism of his personality which I have before mentioned attracted to him men of the highest type. Clarence Darrow and Henry Demarest Lloyd pleaded the case of the miners before President Roosevelt's commission.

Roosevelt Admired Him.
"Roosevelt himself had said that in his opinion Mitchell was one of the three greatest men in the country and the President had compared Mitchell's attitude with that of the coal operators unfavorably to the operators.

"Such geniuses as Mark Twain were drawn to the defense of the miners. The operators had largely alienated public opinion by issuing the famous statement in which George F. Baer had said that 'the natural resources of the country were safe in the hands of men ordained by God to take care of them.' The brilliant manner in which Mitchell presented the case for the miners to courts and the public at large, his resolute determination not to accept defeat and the loyalty with which the rank and file followed him, finally brought him out the victor in one of the most desperate undertakings ever launched in behalf of the poor and oppressed of the earth.

"There is no greater testimony to Mitchell's organizing genius than the fact that when he first took office in the United Mine Workers of America, there were only 7000 members and that when he left the membership was 300,000 and the mine workers today are generally regarded as the spearhead of labor in this country.

Consider His Career.
"I have come to do tribute to the memory of John Mitchell. I would go many times the distance for the same purpose. Let us who are now fighting labor's battle consider the career of that brave spirit and take fresh courage, inspired by his example.

"Let us remember his burning passion for justice, his devotion to the humblest creatures in the University will be unable to make the speech in nomination of President Coolidge at the Cleveland convention. The difficulty lies in the fact that commencement at Washington University falls on June 12, the same day on which the nominating speech is scheduled.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, May 20.—It has been definitely learned here that Chancellor Hadley of Washington University will be unable to make

$1,000,000 GIFT FOR RHEIMS CATHEDRAL

Rockefeller Money to Augment Meager French Appropriation for Restoring Roof.

By the Associated Press.
PARIS, May 25.—John D. Rockefeller Jr. has placed $1,000,000 at the disposal of a Franco-American committee to reconstruct the roof of the Rheims Cathedral, destroyed by the Germans in the World War, and restore and beautify the fountains and gardens at Versailles and Fontainebleau.

Translated into francs the donation amounts to 18,500,000, which is an acceptable addition to the two or three million francs, which is all that the French budget permits for the work.

The committee is composed of J. J. Jusserand, French Ambassador to the United States; Gabriel Hanotaux, former Foreign Minister; Maurice Paléologue, former general secretary of the French Foreign Office; Col. H. H. Harjes and Welles Bowditch.

Rockefeller is moved to make this gift, he says, in a letter to Premier Poincaré, dated May 25, because "among the treasures of which France is custodian are some which belong to the patrimony of all nations, for their influence is a source of inspiration of universal art."

AMERICANS PLACE WREATHS AT FRENCH NATIONAL SHRINE

Services in Paris Follow Memorial Programs at Churches.

By the Associated Press.
PARIS, May 25.—The olive drab uniforms of American veterans grouped about the Arc de Triomphe at noon today brought back to onlookers the jubilee year after the armistice, when American troops played so prominent a part in the celebration of the American National Memorial day in France.

After today's services in the American Episcopal pro-cathedral and the American Protestant and Catholic churches, the members of the American colony, including many reserve officers spending their holidays here, gathered at France's national shrine in order that the Unknown Soldier should not seem to be forgotten by his comrades-in-arms honoring their own dead.

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, May 25.—Americans in Great Britain observed Memorial day throughout the Isles. Members of the American Legion decorated the graves of the American war dead, of which there are 500 in the Kingdom. The principal observance was in St. Margaret's Church, Westminster, where Canon Carnegie, chaplain of the House of Commons, spoke. After the services, Ambassador Kellogg laid a wreath upon the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

A DASH OF RED FOR SOVIETS

Facings on Dress Coats to Be in Communist Colors.

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, May 25.—The Russian delegates to the Anglo-soviet conference apparently intend to accept the invitation extended them to attend the King's levee in St. James Palace on Monday, for they are discussing how they shall dress.

The cards of invitation specifying uniforms or evening dress. As the soviet delegates do not possess uniforms, they must adopt the alternative. They seem, however, not to favor the idea of hiding the communist red on such a conspicuous occasion.

The Daily Herald, the labor organ, quotes M. Bittner, first secretary of the delegation, as saying:

"There have been several proposals made, and possibly the final decision will be to wear black evening dress with red facings on the coat."

DIVORCE ENDS MARITAL TANGLE

By the Associated Press.

SALE CLAIR, Wis., May 25.—Mrs. Leone Sallstad Richardson, wife of the principal in a mystery which remained unsolved for more than two years after the disappearance of Edward J. Sallstad and his former stenographer and "housewife," following a fire in the Sallstad shack on Lake Nauvoo, yesterday obtained a divorce from the senior of her two husbands.

Sallstad was returned to Wisconsin late December after having been found in California by insurance company operatives. Tried for conspiracy to defraud the insurance companies, he was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. His wife, who professed never to have doubted her husband's death and had married in the interim of his absence, instituted divorce proceedings.

KILLS MAN, SHOTS HIS SON

By the Associated Press.
ALTON, Mo., May 25.—George Clark shot Judd Robinson through the heart with a shotgun in Del-hat yesterday and after reloading the gun shot Robinson's 18-year-old son, William, in the hips as the boy ran from the scene of the tragedy. The father died instantly.

Clark and Robinson, it is reported, had had some trouble and Clark went into a store and came out with the gun and said, "Now make me run" or something to that effect. It is reported that Judd Robinson then started toward Clark with a hammer and Clark fired. Prosecuting Attorney Wallace brought Clark to the county jail and charged him with first degree murder.

LABOR WEATHERS ANOTHER STORM IN THE COMMONS

Tory Motion of Censure Is Defeated by 48 Majority, Through the Grace of Liberal Votes.

MACDONALD MAKES A BRILLIANT DEFENSE

Asquith Concedes the Time Has Not Come for Out-sting Government, but Keeps the Ax Suspended.

By JOHN L. BALDERSTON.
London Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.
Copyright, 1924.
LONDON, May 28.—The Labor Government, which hovered on the brink of death for hours yesterday, was saved by a combination of able oratorical efforts by Premier Macdonald in the House of Commons and the reluctance of the Liberal rank and file to run the risk of an immediate general election. The Tory motion to reduce the salary of Labor Minister Tom Shaw was beaten. Such a motion is the equivalent of no confidence, and Macdonald declared he would treat it as such.

When the decision was taken the Government got a majority of 48—the vote was 160 to 212. It was obtained by solid Liberal support and most of the Liberals.

Former Premier Asquith, the Liberal leader, rose just before 8 o'clock tonight to pronounce a sentence on the Government. But his party earlier in the day had been unable to decide whether to evict Labor or not. Decision had been postponed until Macdonald had made his defense to the Tory indictment of broken pledges on unemployment had been heard and considered.

Macdonald in Fine Form.
The Prime Minister delivered a brilliant mixture of threat and concession, of plan for fair play and defense. When he had finished, just after 6, the Liberal jury retired to consider its verdict. Meanwhile the second-raters continued the debate to empty benches while the Liberals discussed their vote.

Former Premier Lloyd George and Sir John Simon favored ousting Labor, but Asquith pleaded the time was not ripe. He contended the Liberal position would be stronger if the fatal blow were postponed until Labor's failure, already manifest to Parliament, became clear to the general public.

This view gained strength through fear of scores of Liberals who would lose their seats to the King decided, when Macdonald resigned, to permit an immediate general election. The party caucus decided, though by no means unanimously, to keep Labor in a short time longer.

When Asquith appeared in the House to announce this decision he obviously enjoyed the dramatic situation. What was coming was unknown to members of the other parties.

For a few minutes the veteran Liberal kept them guessing. Then he granted Labor a lease of life and at the same time complimented Macdonald for his earlier effort by declaring that if the unemployment question had been left where it was a week ago, he and the Liberals would have voted against the Government. However, in view of the Premier's statement regarding the Government's program and intention to put work before maintenance—to provide jobs instead of paying doles from taxpayers' pockets—he would grant Labor more time.

There were ironical Tory jeers at this and cries of "patient oxen," the epithet applied to Liberals as the servants of Labor by Lloyd George in a recent speech.

A Reprieve, Not a Pardon.
But Asquith made it clear the Liberal decision was a reprieve, not a pardon, and the ax was still suspended above Mr. Macdonald's neck. The speaker explained the Liberal vote was given on the understanding it was a chance for Labor to redeem their promises and the vote of censure must be kept open. This means that when the Liberals think time enough has elapsed for Labor to show results, they may call again for last night's motion and will out the Government if they choose.

CAN'T STOP GIBBONS BOU
Governor to Intervene Only if There is a "Prize Fight."

By the Associated Press.
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 28.
—Gov. Emmet F. Branch, T.
Singleton, yesterday replied to the protest sent him from the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church at Grand Rapids, Mich., against permitting the Carpenter-Gibbons boxing contest at Michigan City, Ind., Saturday. The telegram read:

"The Governor directs me to state that he has no authority to set aside the Indiana statutes permitting boxing contests and that ample provision has been made to prevent this contest from becoming a prize fight. If it should become a prize fight, it will be stopped instantly by his representatives."

How Skinny Kids Can Grow Robust

Weak, undernourished, underweight boys and girls who are peevish, fretful and sickly need McEoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets.

Cod Liver Oil would do just as well, but what parent would be so cruel as to give them the horrible, nasty tasting, ill smelling stuff, when sugar coated cod liver oil tablets made by McEoy's Laboratories of New York are as easy to take as candy and won't upset their delicate stomachs.

There's more vitamins of the first class in cod liver oil than in anything else and for that reason,

Which one Needs
McEoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets

Thin, scraggly, sickly children combine to live up and take on good healthy flesh after McEoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets have been taken for just a few days.

Be sure and ask: Wolff Wilson, Judge & Delph Drug Stores, Enderle Drug Co., Johnson Bros. Drug Co., or any good druggist for McEoy's, the original and genuine Cod Liver Oil Tablets. If you want your delicate children to become strong, robust and active.

For grown-ups they are just as wonderful—one woman gained 15 pounds in five weeks, 60 tablets 60 cents and if they don't put 5 pounds of good firm flesh on any thin man or woman in 30 days, get your money back.

POLITICAL WORK OF DALLAS COMMITTEE

1000 Men Said to Have Been Sent Out to Collect Dollar Each From 10,000 Klansmen.

Post-Dispatch Bureau.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—F. N. Littlejohn of Charlotte, N. C., a "life member" of the Ku Klux Klan, asserted on the witness stand before a Senate committee that "between $80,000 and $100,000 was spent to put Mayfield across."

The committee is conducting hearings in the contest brought against the election of Earle B. Mayfield to the United States Senate.

Although subjected to a hostile fire from Mayfield's attorneys and from several members of the committee yesterday, Littlejohn stuck to his story, and W. F. Zimbrun, Mayfield's attorney, turned his attention to trying to discredit the testimony on the theory that Littlejohn is seeking to overthrow the present Klan administration.

H. M. Keeling of Dallas gave the committee a picture of the method in which the Ku Klux Klan works when it is determined to put over a political ticket.

He admitted that the headquarters of the Klan's steering committee at Dallas has expended between $8000 and $10,000 for the ticket of which Mayfield was the head. This headquarters had been under the control of R. P. Lowry, a member of a firm to whom it previously had been testified that over $6000 had been paid out of the "educational" funds of the local Klan. Keeling said that part of the money received by him was turned over by George K. Butcher, a Ku Klux official.

But the checks had been signed "George King" and once Keeling said he had seen Butcher sign a check with the name of King before handing it to him.

Mayfield's Manager on Committee. Mayfield's local campaign manager, Ben C. Richards, was a member of the steering committee, and Z. E. Marvin, who was described as the "head of the Texas Klan," was a frequent visitor at the headquarters, according to the testimony. Here are some of the services that were performed by the committee for Mayfield and other candidates on the ticket as described by Keeling:

Made a card index of every voter in the country, segregating white from black and indicating on the poll list all the names of those voters who were Klansmen.

Prepared a list of all the candidates for office in the State, which was used in instructing precinct workers for whom they were to work.

Organized a financial campaign in which nearly 1000 men were sent out to collect $1 each from 10,000 Klansmen.

Persecuted Sterling Strong, a rival of Mayfield, to get out of the race by telling him "he would have to get out" that Mayfield was the logical candidate.

Organized Klan precinct captains in every district to make a personal appeal to every voter.

"I understood right from the start," Keeling testified, "that everything was secret. We were to keep our movements as quiet as possible and not let the people know we were conducting a campaign."

He described a public initiation of Klansmen where men with hooded faces handed out sample ballots containing only the names of those who were "right."

Machine in Every Precinct. "We perfected a machine in every precinct," the witness went on. "We called together all the men we knew were our way and instructed them to beat the bushes."

Littlejohn told of a conversation he had had with Dr. E. W. Evans, "imperial wizard" of the Klan, at the imperial palace in Atlanta, at which, he said, Evans reported that between $80,000 and $100,000 had been expended through the Klan's national organization in order to accomplish the election of the Mayfield ticket in Texas.

Littlejohn supplied the names of several others who were present at this conference. Luther Nickels, counsel for George E. B. Peddy, who is contesting Mayfield's seat, expects to call these others to the stand to corroborate Littlejohn's story.

Littlejohn conceded he had become dissatisfied with the way in which Klan affairs were run and had joined with E. T. Clarke, former imperial wizard, to gather "data" to unseat the existing Ku Klux regime.

Littlejohn at an expenditure out of his own pocket of about $2000, has been visiting various parts of the country, according to the statement, collecting data and evidence. He intended to use this, he at first told the committee, to purge the Klan of those who were "destroying it." Later he admitted under pressure from committee members that he hoped to reimburse himself for expenditures he had made out of the "treasury" of the organization.

ANNEXATION PLAN
STARTED 15 YEARS AGO, LASHLY SAYS

Chairman of County Committee Outlines Complete History of Extension Question in Statement.

FAVORS BOARD DRAFTING SCHEME

Plan of Freeholders Would Be Placed Before Voters in Separate City and County Elections.

Arthur V. Lashly, chairman of the St. Louis County Committee on Expansion Proposals, has issued a statement tracing the history of the annexation movement and supporting the proposed constitutional amendment to enable expansion, which is being backed by the Metropolitan Committee of the Chamber of Commerce.

While the County Committee which was appointed by the County Court and comprises men of varying political beliefs, is not committed to support of the proposed amendment, which would simply provide for a board of freeholders, of city and county to draft a scheme of expansion, under definite alternatives, which would then be voted on by the city and county, separately. In resolving to approve the proposal the County Committee also agreed to co-operate fully with the Metropolitan Committee.

Lashly, an attorney, was a member of the recent Constitutional Convention, and advocate of Amendment No. 11, proposed by it as one means of enabling expansion, but which went down to defeat with other amendments.

Agitated for 15 Years.

Lashly's statement follows: "For nearly 15 years the question of annexation of portions of the whole of St. Louis County by the City of St. Louis has been agitated by various individuals and organizations in that city. The matter has been before the Legislature in various forms during practically the whole period mentioned. Some of this agitation has been obviously for the purpose of advancing the personal interests of the agitators. The press generally of the city has advocated in good faith the adoption of some legislation or constitutional authority for the extension of the city limits, believing that the interests of the people of the city, and of the county as well, would be better served by such an expansion. There has also been a feeling that the city is restricted in its development by the iron-clad constitutional boundaries fixed by the constitutional convention of 1870.

"Unfortunately most of the agitation of this question has been carried on in a way that apparently did not take into consideration the rights and interests of the people of St. Louis County, and it has appeared to most county residents that those who were behind the movement in the city were bent upon forcing through some plan of annexation whether the people of St. Louis County consented to it or not. Naturally, a feeling of resentment has prevailed in the county against such movements, and it is no doubt true that this feeling has been encouraged and agitated by some of our own St. Louis County people, who may have found it to their individual advantage to keep alive this sentiment.

Co-Operation Lacking.

In other words, there has been no spirit of co-operation and consideration for the minority interest in this matter, namely, St. Louis County, or at least not enough of such a spirit of co-operation as to result in the serious consideration of the matter without feeling or prejudice on either side. The resentment among the people of the county was recently greatly enhanced by a proposed amendment to the Constitution originating with Hugh K. Wagner and the Greater St. Louis conference, by the provisions of which St. Louis County was to be automatically absorbed and consolidated with the city and put under the government of the city if the amendment received a majority of the votes of the whole State, without any opportunity being given the people of the two communities solely interested in work out for themselves a plan of adjustment of the relations between the two communities, and without giving the people of both communities the right to vote separately upon any such proposed plan.

Proposition Rejected.

The attention of the Chamber of Commerce, which is regarded by most of the people of St. Louis County as the strongest civic organization in the city, was called to the proposed amendment, and consideration given thereto by a very capable committee. They re-

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

Founded by JOSEPH PULITZER
Dec. 12, 1878.Published by the Pulitzer Publishing Company, Twelfth Boulevard and Olive StreetTHE POST-DISPATCH PLAT-FORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles, that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent, never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

JOSEPH PULITZER

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

The name and address of the author must accompany every contribution, but no request will not be published. Letters not exceeding 200 words will receive preference.

Cut Your Weeds.

LAST year's Weed Committee of the Junior Chamber had good co-operation from the Health and Police Departments of the city, which resulted in high weeds being cut on vacant lots in all sections of the city.

This year the Weed Committee wants to get into action earlier and ask the people who know of high weeds to send the location, and if possible, the name and address of the owner to the Junior Chamber office, Chamber of Commerce Building.

JUNIOR CHAMBER WEED COMMITTEE.

Disarming the People.

IT WAS a pleasure to read your editorial of May 22, entitled "A Disarmed Citizenry," and I heartily hope that you will not spare publicity and comment on the sinister attitude of Congress toward the second amendment to the United States Constitution, which guarantees the right of the people to keep and bear arms.

In this, as in other infringements on our constitutional rights, your own declarations have ever been enheartening, and were they but heeded by the powers political, there would be little to fear for the safety of our national bill of rights. As it is, under the influence of intimidating forces, the Congress seems to function no longer as an independent body; the evaporation of the Constitution progresses cheerfully, and between corruption, class legislation, and the malevolent hysteria of the "Pharisees, the American Government, as planned and enacted, must presently cease to be.

The effort to disarm our people must be arrested, or disaster will follow. The constitutional guaranty that such shall never be was not given lightly, for the first defense of home, as well as country, lies in the able use of weapons. Such weapons may not be makeshifts, but the best that can be had, a bit better than the stymie, if so it be possible.

I am sending you two enclosures, the one a remembrance sent last month to a newspaper that advocated the virtual disarming of all individuals, the other an illustrated article from the current issue of The American Rifleman, showing the utter absurdity of suppressing the ownership of pistols, when an efficient and most murderous substitute can be made from any old shotgun in nine minutes by the watch. Incidentally, I have tried the game experiment myself, with like results.

There is nothing new in the arguments offered, but their truth is beyond all argument, and I hope that you will use them, in whole or in part, now or later, when they may serve.

EDWARD V. PAPIN.

Bandits Deserve Death.

THE Post-Dispatch letters and editorials advocating the possession of firearms as a protection against bandits deserve to be widely read and appreciated. However, a complete solution to the holdup menace does not lie with an armed citizenry. Ever with every reputable voter carrying a gun, there still would be quite a number of daring robberies, with occasional shooting scrapes as added attractions. So the solution will have to be sought elsewhere.

It would be easy to find if people really wanted to do so. The holdup men constitute a very small part of the population. Should these few degenerates give us a standing problem? Or should we hire them to quit? It is ridiculous. Fifty years ago it was only natural to expect to be attacked on the wild prairie, but to be held up on the streets of a modern city is too absurd for words. Bandits could easily and quickly be stepped. Arouse public sentiment to the boiling point. Then we can adopt the extreme measures necessary to bring the desired results. What are these measures?

When an outlaw holds a gun against your forehead, the slightest motion on your part can cause him to pull the trigger. He is a potential murderer. But, unless he actually kills somebody, he is not adequately punished—often not even then. Except in cases of actual murder, he usually gets a short prison term, and is soon back at his former occupation, pointing a revolver at people's heads. Why give the outlaw so much consideration? Why give him a second chance at murder? Why wait till he actually kills someone before making him harmless? Is that justice to the law-abiding citizen? Is it liberty? Is it democracy?

Make every bandit and bank robber forever harmless immediately after his first apprehension. Execute him as quickly as possible. A life term is not severe enough. As long as he is alive he is dangerous. Nor would a life term, sufficiently frighten the bandit who is still at large. Sending the murderer and would-be murderer to prison with the intention of reforming him has its merits, but it does not afford adequate protection for the law-abiding citizen. Nothing less than the death penalty can scare the hardened criminal. POSITIVE.

RHEIMS—A WAR MEMORIAL

Giving full credit to John D. Rockefeller Jr. for his generous impulse in donating $1,000,000 to reconstruct Rheims Cathedral, repair the fountains of Versailles and restore Fontainebleau to its former condition, and realizing fully the grief of the French people over the injury to these masterpieces of art and their ardent desire to restore them, we feel that it would have been a good plan to let Rheims Cathedral at least stand unrestored, as a memorial of the destructiveness of war.

Nothing was more shocking to the civilized world than the destruction by the German armies of the wonderful structures embodying all the finest arts of the Middle Ages and the centuries immediately following them. Louvain and Ypres and Rheims represented the climax of war's ruthlessness. They were examples of the terrible destructiveness of modern arms and the barbarity of modern war.

Would it not have been a good idea to let at least one of these examples stand in partly ruined condition, to remind the world forever of what may be expected as long as might rules and armaments are the only protection of peoples from aggression and invasion and the peoples of the world might be drawn into conflict and forced to employ all of their resources and all of the modern implements of destruction?

Rheims, on account of its age, its wonderful architecture, its exemplification of all the arts in perfection which are the handmaids of architecture, and on account of the ruin wrought to its beauty, was a conspicuous example of what may be expected in another war. It is a signal proof that neither age, nor sacredness, nor art, nor worth, nor beauty is respected in war.

Of course, it had to be repaired so that the monument would stand, but it cannot be fully restored as it was. The work of skilled hands to which the lives of many during centuries were devoted cannot be brought back. It can only be imitated. Enough remained to suggest its marvelous perfection. And standing as a ruined cathedral with the brains and hands that originally constructed it gone, and its exact replacement impossible, the world could not help but see in it a warning against war. One of the difficulties of impressing upon people the destructiveness of war is the rapidity with which its ravages are repaired and covered by nature and by man. Cities are rebuilt, new orchards grown, fields are replanted, the new generations see nothing to remind them of the folly and brutality of past wars.

Rheims restored would be a delight to coming generations. But the blasted wreck of an incomparable masterpiece might be more valuable. Its broken spires would point to a higher civilization than the world has yet been able to achieve.

GLUTTONY CAUSING CANCER.

As no prohibition amendment has been suggested to stop overeating, which Dr. Charles H. Mayo says is one of the principal causes of cancer, we shall have to rely on publicity as a means of education, and upon individual self-control as the only means of slowing up the immediate eaters who so often "dig their graves with their teeth."

Is there any effect of excessive drinking of any potable beverage, alcoholic or otherwise, so dreadful as this effect of overeating? Would any sane person take a chance of becoming a victim to cancer? Dr. Mayo assures us that the doctors will find a cure for it within a few years. But up to this time the disease is only curable in its first stages, and then by the knife. The alleviation by means of serums, radium or X-rays, Dr. Mayo says, is in the experimental stage, and he is not sure which, if any, of these remedies will be the predicted cure.

We have all inherited the tendency to excess in eating and drinking from the days of barbarism, when food and drink were uncertain and hunger and thirst often almost unbearable. It is possible now, without laws or prohibitions, to eat and drink without courting disease or delirium.

WHY THE CONGRESSIONAL GLOOM?

An astonishing statement is made by Charles Michelson, Post-Dispatch correspondent, in a description of the political atmosphere in Washington. Probably much of the pessimism of Republican Senators, he says, is due to "the feeling of many of them who came up for re-election this time that they are personally fated for defeat in November." While there may be a question of the

Has not Congress danced dutifully and joyfully to the whip of all the lobbies and blocs which are its masters? Has it not spurred principle and cringed before the big stick of organized minorities? Having played every string of expediency and disregarded the foolish wrath of the righteous why should it have fear?

Verily it would seem that conscience doth make cowards of us all. Those lawmakers who have done the most to avoid being defeated realize full well that they ought to be. Where is the man who has voted in all instances to satisfy his conscience who is afraid to meet his constituents at the polls?

MEMORIAL DAY.

Today the people of the United States pay tribute of honor and reverence to their heroic dead; they turn their eyes reverently to cross-marked resting places beyond the seas, where lie thousands of Americans who gave the last full measure of their devotion upon the altar of freedom. Their sacrifice is the price that was paid for the security of the nation today. They met death with unflinching courage, and their passing was a solemn charge to those into whose hands the affairs of government might fall, that they do the things most needed for the wellbeing of the republic.

Sixty-one years ago, Abraham Lincoln, in his immortal speech at Gettysburg battlefield, gave voice to the sentiment that prevails today, when he said:

"... We cannot dedicate—we cannot consecrate—we cannot hallow—this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here have consecrated it, far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced."

The ideals that were dear to the hearts of the men to whose memory this day is dedicated have not been maintained. Legislative blocs, bigoted prevention societies, corrupt officials and unprincipled financiers—selfishness and greed—mar the land. The apostles of fidelity to American ideals protest in vain. Their voices are drowned by the din of loud-mouthed cupidity, masqueraded, often, under a cloak of patriotism.

If there be, in this land, a majority of men who hunger for decent politics and clean government, surely contemplation of the sacrifices these men made will inspire forgetfulness of petty differences, and bring about a unity of action that will re-establish the principles and standards of the past.

SCHOOLS AND SCHOOL BOARDS.

The best proof of the average public school's worth is that it survives the average School Board. The St. Louis schools have proven their worth in several instances.

There was the case of the Lebanon (Ill.) board, dominated by incorrigible parents, which displaced a capable Superintendent because, in raising the standard of the schools, he had been compelled to discipline incorrigible children, and in displacing him incurred community disapproval.

And now here is the case of the University City board, which has brought upon itself the rebuke of the patrons for failing to reappoint a capable principal and, through interference and annoyance, losing the services of an efficient Superintendent.

In both cases it seems that board members, prompted by pettiness motives, have harmed the schools it is their duty to help.

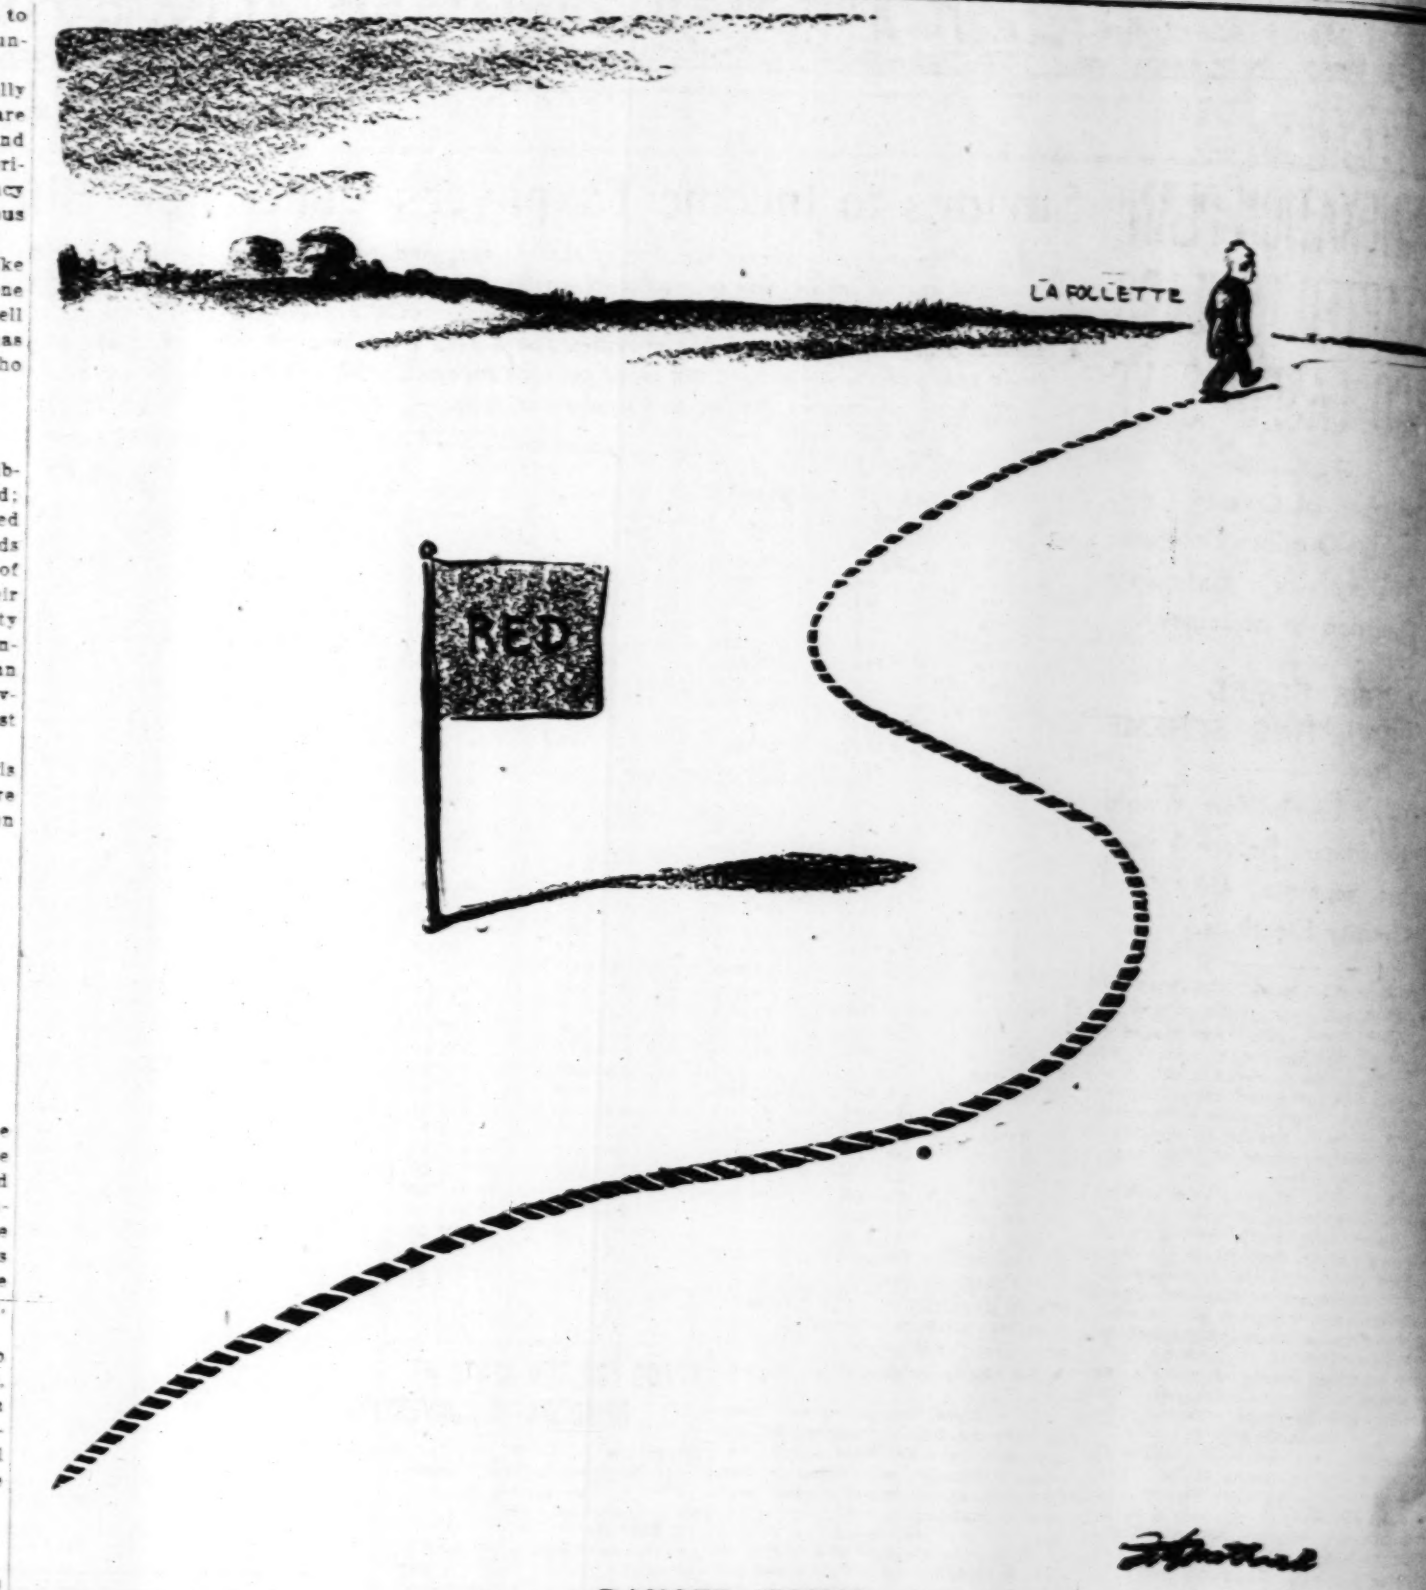

Most members of school boards are persons of good intentions who know little or nothing about how schools should be conducted. Their chief opportunity for usefulness is in refraining from interference with the school executives and teachers, who know how schools should be conducted.

When, as in these instances, considerations other than administrative and pedagogical excellence are indulged, injury is done to the schools. They will survive it, such is their worth, but it is a besetment to which they should not be subjected.

Science has no quarrel with tax reduction that reduces.

DECORATION DAY.

THREE generations of women will stand on the bridge on Memorial day. With wreaths and flowers in every hand.

While the bells will plaintively play. The white hatted "gobs" will come swinging along. Son-tanned with the wind and the weather; The Martins will bear their colors half staff. And all will stand listening together. While the sky-pilot prays that somehow, somewhere,

The flowers we strew on the wave. Will rest for a moment just above Some gallant sea-fighter's grave. And he'll pray for Peace and Brotherhood. While we, the Mothers of Men, Stand silently by, with brimming eyes. Each heart beat crying "Amen!"

Will grandmothers, mothers and young wives stand. As mute, martyred mothers have stood. Or will they arise and with one voice declare: "I've no son for a cannon's food!"

The child I have nurtured and given to Life And trained to think with his brain—I have given enough to the cause of strife—I will not give again!

Since I have given a son to the world, All the sons of women are mine— They shall not go out for a earthly king Or imagined boundary line— To lose the life I so gladly gave. For we know, as Mothers of Men, That no man who has smelled the sham-bles' stench But will echo our cry with, "Amen!"

Proposals to exterminate the crow probably have their origin in dislike of the crow as our only competitor in thievery. Whether a crow is a bigger thief than a man has not been determined. The worst either could fear in a contest would be a tie. This, of course, is intolerable, since man brooks no equality with his own genus. So we are asked to kill crows. Indeed, crows are detestable. They eat the eggs of other birds and feast upon the helpless young. One naturalist counted more than 1000 egg shells, ranging from those of the turkey and hen down to those of the tiniest birds, together with innumerable bones of lesser birds, under five nests of fish crows. That is nothing to the depredations and killings of man, but it is enough to gain recognition for the crow as a rival. His name is Dennis.

Sir, While returning from work this evening noticed parties moving in house on 5300 block on Theodora, but what attracted my attention was an old sign hunter was a big board running across the lawn and on it was painted "Flint-hearted Landlords, tell it to me now. I dare you—Ex-Victims, Joe Simmons, it struck me as being worth while as otherwise it would not be there without some reason.—WM. GOLDSMITH, R. R. 23, Rock Road Terrace, St. Louis County.

Since this is free for all. We have read your clever call. And your genial thrust at Reverend John McCarthy.

But we must resent your jest. For McCarthy at his best, Is a most consistent man, whatever his party.

We do not think because One is fighting for a cause, With his cards before the public plain to view. That a "snooper" or "stool-pigeon," Or a slur at one's religion.

Should enter the discussion—now do you? We love this ruddy Mac. And he's standing at his back. And his "blat-note" has our straight O. K.

For we know that in his fight He has courage, vision, sight. And he always signs his name; not his initial.

MEMORIAL DAY REVERIE.

To a town in France called Cheppy and my vanished dreams— To these two my mind will hearken when the twilight gleams. For at Cheppy some lie sleeping in their narrow bed. And my dreams? But then, I'm thinking those old dreams are fled.

'Tis through pain that we reach triumph— through the cross, the crown; In the footsteps of the Master were their lives laid down. With a dream of Earth made better did they gladly die. But that day seems far from dawning, and I wonder why.

Gay young hearts that once beat lightly: bright young lips that laughed. Though the cup that they drained was the war god's bitter draught; Now at Cheppy they are sleeping, 'neath the crosses plain: And my dreams—but then, I'm thinking that those dreams are vain.

Did they dream, then, in vain? Must their lives then go for naught? You have paid with their blood, true; but then what have you bought? Now at Cheppy they lie sleeping 'neath the starry sky. For a dream their lives were given—and I wonder why.

OUR DEBT TO THE POTBOILERS.

FROM THE BROOKLYN EAGLE.
PRESIDENT SIMON L. NYE of the American Bookellers' Association says too many books are being published and makes an appeal for fewer potboilers and for more worth-while books. Incidentally, Mr. Nye complains of conditions which seem to imply are altogether new, and wants to get back to some other period when, he seems to think, literature was a more healthy state. Just when such a period existed has been lost from the record. There has never been a time since the making of books began when anyone has not voiced the complaint now being made by Mr. Nye. It is true that there has been an increase in the volume of printed matter, and with this swelling of the tide the amount of trash has increased, but it remains to be proved that the percentage of ephemeral literature has increased disproportionately. And it remains to be proved that the increase in the number of books published, regardless of their character, is a bad thing. * * * Mr. Nye's real quarrel, if he has one, is with the public taste, which is always being degraded by critics. But he should know that the potboilers he condemns keep publishers going and enable them to bring out the books more worth while for which they can expect little or no profit. And potboilers also help to keep the writers of worth-while books alive. That is why they are called potboilers. Authors and publishers have long faced the conditions which Mr. Nye deprecates. They have adjusted themselves to those conditions. It remains for the bookellers to do the same.

The trouble springs from the fact that people's tastes differ so widely, but this is good for literature, and not the reverse, Mr. Nye seems to think.

ROADS IN NATIONAL PARKS.

DIRECTOR STEPHEN T. MATHER in World's Work.

THE greatest need of our present parks is road improvement and construction of new roadways. * * * Since 1872, when the first national park in the world—Yellowstone—was created, a total of over a little more than $2,000,000 has been spent on the park roads. All of them were built for horse-drawn wagons and stages. They are in most instances too narrow for automobiles, contain too much loose gravel, and have not the base to withstand the severe pounding of the motor traffic in which they are subjected. There is pressing before Congress a bill authorizing a three-year road program, with an expenditure of $7,500,000. I am firmly convinced that the development of the parks by the road, and only those needed to facilitate easy access to the most scenic sections will be constructed. Large areas will be retained in their original wilderness condition, accessible only by trails for pack riding and hiking. In several places we have been urged to construct roads through sections of a park that are ranges of the wild animals. In order to consider these projects favorably, Service is complying with the expressed will of Congress to conserve the scenery of the parks.

BOYS OF '98 TAKE A LEADING PART IN MEMORIAL PARADE

Spanish War Men Out in Greater Proportion Than Membership Than Other Veterans' Organizations.

BOY SCOUTS MARCH
WITH LEGIONNAIRES

Civil War Soldiers Taken in Automobiles to Jefferson Barracks for Ceremonies.

The boys of '98, middle-aged veterans of the Spanish-American War, took a leading part in the Memorial day parade on Twelfth boulevard this afternoon, which constituted the city's ceremonial observance of the patriotic holiday.

The Spanish War men were out in almost as large numbers, and in far greater proportion to their membership, than the American Legion and other organizations of World War veterans. The World War men have shown more interest in the observance of Armistice day than in that of Memorial day, and this suggests that at some future time, Nov. 11 may supplant May 30 as the national day for the reviving of military memories.

Boy Scouts March.

A body of Boy Scouts, marching with the Legion, seemed to suggest a more momentous question, when the veterans of the World War are as old as the Spanish War men are today, or as old as the few remaining veterans of the Civil War, will there be another body of young veterans, from some war now in the future?

As in recent years, the Grand Army of the Republic did not appear in the parade which passed the reviewing stand on Twelfth boulevard, north of Olive street, at 12:30 p. m. A number of the Civil War veterans were taken in automobiles to Jefferson Barracks, for the exercises of the late afternoon there.

With the G. A. R. no longer in the parade, the United Spanish War Veterans headed the line. Six posts were well represented, many of the members wearing uniforms of modern color, though some were in the blue they wore at Camp Chickamauga or in Porto Rico.

In recent years the interest of the Spanish War veterans in their organization has increased greatly, and today's showing is believed to have been the largest they have made here since the post-war parades which marked the visits of President McKinley and Admiral Dewey. Several automobiles carried wounded veterans of the World War.

Twelve posts of the American Legion sent their banners, some with hardly more than a color guard, while the two posts at the head of the line, Quentin Roosevelt and Joseph M. Fournier posts, had a considerable number.

Col. E. J. Spencer, in the reviewing stand, had as his guests two best officers in uniform, Capt. H. de Loyola, and Capt. Charles Vical. Col. John A. Laird headed the parade as chief of staff.

Marching north on Twelfth to Washington avenue, the line turned east, and proceeded to the levee where the Steamer St. Paul waited to take the paraders to Jefferson Barracks.

Exercises at Barracks.

The afternoon's exercises at the Barracks included a review of the Sixth Infantry, and the decoration of graves at the National Cemetery, a ceremony in which, as in former years, the ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic was followed.

The city's all-day observance of the holiday included the closing of public offices, courts, schools, banks, exchanges and large stores, and the suspension of mail deliveries in the residence districts.

A memorial service for sailors and marines, who lost their lives at sea throughout the history of the American navy and Marine Corps, was held on the middle span of the municipal bridge at 10:30 a. m. under auspices of Grand Circle No. 17. Ladies of the G. A. R. There were addresses by Mrs. J. Hal Lynch, president of the circle, and Dr. Roland Hill, president of the St. Louis Medical Society. The national anthem was played by the band of Perfection Chapter, De Molay, after which uniformed sailors from the local navy recruiting office fired three volleys in the air. Then all present joined in throwing bunches of roses, daisies and other flowers into the Mississippi, far beneath. A bugler sounded "Stars and Stripes" and the band played patriotic songs in closing.

The Ladies of the G. A. R. and Women's Relief Corps also decorated the statue of Gen. U. S. Grant at the northeast corner of the City Hall grounds, overlooking what is to be a few years to be Memorial Plaza.

URGES BOY WELFARE WORK

Judge Says Not One Scout Has Been Delinquent.

Not one boy among the 14,000 delinquents who came before him while he was on the Juvenile Court bench, was a Boy Scout, Circuit Judge Moses Hartman told the current club at a meeting at Hotel Claridge last night.

He urged men of the city to take more interest in boy welfare work. It is not Judge Hartman's belief that reformatories reform. He said he thought they have a tendency to harden boys. Breaking up the street corner gang, then, is the real remedy for the boy problem.

GOLD STAR MOTHERS ON ANNUAL PILGRIMAGE

Trees Dedicated to Memory of the Soldier Dead Decorated With Flags and Wreaths.

Gold Star Mothers—mothers whose sons died for their country in the World War—were honored in the annual pilgrimage over Kingshighway Memorial boulevard yesterday afternoon. This ceremony is held on May 29 each year, so that the mothers may visit the cemeteries on the following day—Decoration day.

While small in numbers, the group of Gold Star Mothers was the center of interest. Some are elderly, even aged, and gray-haired, and resemble the traditional mother of song and story. Others were much younger and seemed too young to have contributed a son to their country. All were sad-eyed, and many were weeping. It was gloomy outside, drizzling rain occasionally, and there was no band playing martial airs, merely a bugler who sounded taps.

Firing Squad Salutes Dead.
The assembling of Gold Star Mothers and other relatives of the dead, American Legion men and women, representatives of other patriotic organizations, and city officials began at 4 p. m. at Kingshighway and Easton avenue. Half an hour later, after a firing squad from Jefferson Barracks had saluted the dead, the pilgrimage of automobiles moved north in the boulevard to Florissant avenue and then returned, a platoon of mounted police leading the way.

The Court of Honor, extending from Corte Brillante avenue to Florissant avenue, was passed in reverent silence. In it are growing 503 trees dedicated to the memory of the heroic dead. Yesterday each tree was decorated with an American flag and a floral wreath.

Speaking Program Abandoned.
Due to the inclement weather, the speaking program was abandoned and the program ended with benediction by the Rev. Robert J. McPeck, rector of St. Michael and All Angels' Church, who is chaplain of the Fred W. Stockham Post of the American Legion. The services, witnessed by about 1,000 men, women and children,

FIRST FULL PERFORMANCE OF OPERA LIKE FAR-NORTH MOVIE

Audience Physically Chilly, but Warm in Appreciation of Players' Efforts.

The frosted breaths of Princess Chic and the Duke of Burgundy, which encircled their heads during their warmest love songs, gave last night's performance in the Municipal Theater the air of a Far-North movie. The audience could see not only the performers' breath, but its own, and the temperature in the hillside amphitheater was apparently several degrees below the 56-degree mark officially recorded downtown.

However, both the overcast audience and the players were happy, since there was no recurrence of the rain which prevented a performance Monday night, curtailed that of Tuesday night and stopped that of Wednesday night in the first act. Dorothy Francis, in the title role of "Princess Chic," was able for the first time to wear a gown and tilt in her third-act love song, and the four comedians had their first chance at their quartet number in the same act. It was all charmingly done, and those present—some 3,500—showed hearty appreciation.

were under the auspices of the World War Registrars, with which the Gold Star Mothers are affiliated. Mrs. J. P. Gorman, honorary chairman of the Clifford Gorman Post of the American Legion, was chairman of the Pilgrimage Committee and was assisted by Mrs. H. W. Walker, national Gold Star chairman, and Dr. R. O. Owen, stand marshal.

HOW NEWSPAPERS VIEW LA FOLLETTE'S PROSPECTIVE CANDIDACY

the House, where his friends may hold the balance of power. To there throw the prize to Coolidge and the reactionaries who surround and dominate him, would be stultification. Here we have reason enough for the nomination in New York of a Progressive on a Progressive platform.

"One of the things the La Follette letter does is to warn the Democracy against any foolish, futile compromise with the reaction. That would be to make a rendezvous with death. Whatever La Follette may do, the progressive spirit of the nation is predominant and will prevail, and in the party of Wilson is true to its faith, no matter what contingency may arise, it should reap the benefit of its fidelity."

New York Sun: "What La Follette says, in effect, is that if both major parties are conservative he will run for President and perhaps defeat the conservative Republican; the states where he is strong—Wisconsin, Minnesota, the Dakotas and Montana—are normally Republican. If the Democratic platform is radical enough to suit him he will not run on a third ticket. The logic of the situation would call on him to support the Democratic candidate under such circumstances but the chances are a hundred to one that he will continue to be a nominal Republican. He finds adherence to the Republican party at election time a convenient means of keeping in office."

Brooklyn Daily Eagle: It is improbable that the convalescence of Senator La Follette at Atlantic City, after a severe illness will be delayed by the political excitement attending the publication of his letter to Attorney-General Kern of Wisconsin. If the Senator possesses a sense of humor, which many of his critics deny, his restoration to health will be helped by what he named at Cleveland as "succeeding himself." If he seriously thinks of purging as a possibility in either party his hope must center on the Democratic convention.

Apparently the Democratic convention offers only a slim chance of gaining the La Follette support for its nominee, for nothing is surer than that the Senator will insist that the candidate shall be as irreproachable as the country and all human probability, therefore, Mr. La Follette will feel compelled to run by the very force of circumstances. The declaration attributed to the elder Pitt, "I know that I can save this country and I know that no other man can do so," is in substance adopted by Mr. La Follette as his own. He says, after demanding that the two parties subscribe to his political creed, "If this is not done, a long-suffering and righteously indignant people will find in the coming campaign effective means, independent of these old parties, to take back control of their government and make it truly representative."

The New York American makes no direct comment on Senator La Follette's declaration but today prints a two-column editorial setting forth the nation's great need of leadership and pointing out that the arms reduction agreement, the failure to grant discriminatory customs rates to merchandise carried in American bottoms, the peace treaty negotiated by President Wilson and the Dawes report as proofs of bad leadership. In its final paragraph, it says:

"If a political party, old or new, can put forth a platform and a candidate which, in its declarations of foreign policy, promises American leadership in America's interests, it will find a grateful echo in the hearts of American voters. It will find an unequalled support in the columns of these American Hearst newspapers."

Washington Post: Senator La Follette has performed a good public service by exposing and denouncing the communists who have gained a foothold in the Farmer-Labor-Progressive convention at St. Paul on June 17. The American reds are acting under the advice and guidance of the reds of Russia, as is shown by the correspondence quoted by Senator La Follette.

Baltimore Sun: It is quite evident that Senator La Follette is clearing the decks for action. His statement reading the communists out of his personally conducted presidential expedition, had the vigor and purposefulness of the old days of progressivism; of the days when William Howard Taft was being tumbled from the pinnacle of the White House, and when Aldrich and Cannon were being sent headlong into the dust of the desert when Senator La Follette himself, his brilliant pompadour innocent of today's white hairs, was earning the sobriquet "Battling Bob."

At first blush it may appear that he took long chances on thus placing his political anathema on the ladies and gentlemen of the extreme left. But doubtless he knew what he was about; there are few more skillful practical politicians in the land. And the assumption that he knew what he was about will be sustained by examination of the facts. . . . It may be concluded that Senator La Follette has sacrificed little in actual strength while protecting his flank against the attack of the old parties. And the chances are that the protection he has set up against the old parties will be effective. Reading out of the La Follette movement the communists will not convince those who see red whenever La Follette's name is mentioned or the name of any other dissenter. But La Follette is not concerned with base extremists of the right. His concern is to keep straight with the dissatisfied but unsocialized masses of the West. Very likely, few of that class were troubled, for La Follette, radical as he may be, has nothing in his career that is communistic. But though many or few are troubled, he has cleaned the record and is now ready for his frontal attack on the old parties.

Philadelphia Bulletin: It is still La Folletteism, with its scheme of Government ownership and paternalistic experimentation, with its urge that Congress should override the Supreme Court, its rebellion against the Constitution and its demagogic of class play against class, which is the real menace of American institutions—not communism, which has never succeeded in getting a hold in the American mind.

Washington News: Senator La Follette has cleared the air by his letter about the St. Paul convention. Both old parties have a chance to purge themselves at their national conventions by smashing machines and repudiating the control of inviolable government. Unless the old parties do this the voters should be given an opportunity to repudiate them.

It is entirely plain that La Follette expects this opportunity to be offered by the political conference at Cleveland on July 4, writing a new progressive platform and naming an independent presidential ticket. A similar proposition has never been presented either to American voters or American politicians.

the Springfield convention six weeks ago. It apparently has been his purpose to attempt to make such a showing of strength out in the country that the city politicians would come to his aid in the belief that he would win anyway and that they would want to get on the "landwagon."

Jacobs, however, has run into a very profound Nelson support in the country, where Nelson's appeal to the farmer has gained for him a strong foothold, making him a formidable if not the leading candidate.

Moore alone among the candidates has declared himself on the klan issue. In St. Louis a week ago he denounced the klan in vigorous fashion. Nelson who spoke at the same meeting avoided mentioning it, and Jacobs in his remarks in the country has sidestepped the issue.

WANTS--REAL ESTATE

PART THREE.

Unusual Tales Of Adventure, Tragedy, Mystery, Humor From Real Life

By Robert Welles Ritchie.
THE BOX-FIGHT IN PUERTO.

It was the American Vice Consul who told me this story. Call the name of that flea-bitten little Central American port where Briggs lived under the great shield of the United States Puerto del Toro; that will do as well as any other. All banana palm green over red tile roofs and peons asleep in doorways and revolutions every third Thursday of the month—there you have the atmosphere.

Briggs and I stretched in wicker chairs out in the cool patio. Something with ice in it which clinked when the glass was lifted. A parrot colored like a futurist's mad dream clucking and muttering to himself on a nearby perch. And Briggs, the red-headed, drawing in his Southern speech—

"You know this man if you ever lived in San Francisco"—he named a very familiar name; the possessor of that name now is Society's darling in New York and Miami. "One of the funniest rooks the Lord ever made. He paid his way to pleasures with his wit, for he had no other coin in the old days, however much he may have tucked away today. And this Frazier fellow"—the name is spurious—"traveled with the high-rolling crowd that used to make San Francisco one lively place before the great fire. Say they were the most resistant bunch of two-handed drinkers in five states and you'll not go wrong."

"Well sir, one time Frazier and four little friends were just round-broke—fast through swiftness. Golden beach—feathery palms—you know, this sort of stuff—a languid wave of the vice-consul's hand about the patio's riot of color.

"Why not visit Central America?" the lithograph asked.

"Well, we'll be the guests," those merry fellows said. "Why not?"

"So that day they took the steamer. Just like that—impetuous, you see."

"Oh yes, I forgot to say that when they were having their breakfast under that invitation to travel, one of the number was a broken-down prize fighter—a regular pug stand-bearer they'd picked up somewhere during the night. Never saw him before; but that was all right. Bessie the Bum go to Central America too."

"Two in the outfit with not a penny to their name—Frazier and Bessie the Bum; four fine and generous spenders with money enough to finance the debt of China. Time combination."

"Well sir, they date time down here from that day when these six Americans hit this Puerto place. They liked it, so they missed the steamer and staid on. Frazier suggested it would be a snappy thing to give a grand ball and invite the President. They did it. Frazier suggested they could get solid with the army by giving it a bull's head breakfast. They did it. Frazier in the uniform of a brigadier general acted as toastmaster."

"Man dear, Puerto never has seen such prosperity since!"

"Then Frazier got the queen bee idea of them all. He found in one of our many casinos a Mexican who once had worked in San Francisco as trainer in the box fighters' camps out along the beach by the Cliff House. A poor fever-ridden and pulque-addicted bum, this Mexican, but he remembered something about boxing."

"Frazier ribbed him up to meet Bessie the Bum for 20 rounds, in the bull ring of Puerto on the national independence day. He told his rich playfellas about it, but he kept his man dark. Bessie, who'd grown fat and saucy on other people's dineros, knew the fight would be a cinch. These Central Americans didn't savor boxing, thought Benny."

"Man dear, this fellow Frazier bet $5,000 which he didn't have on his Masked Marvel, with odds favoring him at five to one. He'd promised his Mexican bruiser a split, you see, and just had to make good or else take a knife between the ribs."

"The day of the fight—and all Puerto crowded the bull ring as guests of the land Americans—Frazier put something in Bessie's coffee which made him numb from the waist up. I reckon he got the tip on what to use from the Mexican fellow."

"Anyway, Bessie the Bum was knocked cold in the second round and Frazier collected."

LAWYER-PRISONER CROSS-EXAMINER IN EXTORTION CASE

Expected Verbal Clashes Take Record Crowd to Trial of Ex-Prosecutor and Attorney Oakley.

CHIEF DEFENDANT ALREADY CONVICTED

William J. Corcoran Has Been Found Guilty in One Case and Sentenced to 7 to 10 Years.

St. Louis, May 28.—(Herald-Examiner.)—The trial of William J. Corcoran, former prosecutor and attorney, in the extortion case against Daniel H. Coakley, who is being tried on charges of general conspiracy to extort, began yesterday. The trial was held in the courtroom of the St. Louis County Court, presided over by Judge W. H. Whitman. Corcoran, who is the chief defendant, was already convicted in one case and sentenced to 7 to 10 years.

Looking over evidence was given the first place by the former defendant of Corcoran, in the duties assigned him, and in some matters, he said he talked with certain witnesses.

"Bunk," he explained, "in the extortion case, I am trying to lie his way out."

The witness made mention of several admissions he had given to Steneman to "come clean," which he explained again, was to tell everything he knows, not to save himself.

He asserted his cross-examiner, Daniel H. Coakley, that he would be pleased to go to jail with him, adding, "and Corcoran also."

He told of hearing that Coakley had sent men to the Federal Court to "frame" them. Somebody had sent a man named Gallagher into the office of the United States Attorney, he said, and since that time the office had been crooked.

He said he had told Assistant District Attorney Rushell of Middlesex County that "Gallagher and Shea seemed to control the liquor situation in the Federal Court, and expressed doubt that ex-Judge Robert O. Harris is in control there."

The second week of the trial closed with adjournment over the holiday and week-end.

Levenson's explanations of helping the prosecuting authorities was given late yesterday, as throughout the day, he was undergoing cross-examination at Coakley's hands.

Under Prison Sentence.

William J. Corcoran, former District Attorney of Middlesex County, was found guilty early in April of threat to extort, and was sentenced to from seven to ten years in prison. Various motions for a new trial have all been denied. An appeal from the verdict on points of law is now before the State Supreme Court.

In the meantime he is again a defendant, with Coakley, on a charge of general conspiracy, involving the same general matters but on entirely new specific complaints.

The outcome of the trial of Corcoran and a first batch of co-defendants, two of whom were found guilty of being accessories, is the first conviction that has been obtained under the numerous indictments brought in two counties against members of the so-called "blackmail ring."

In this ring, it is alleged by the State, were lawyers, hotel men, women, lured, men who have represented themselves as outraged husbands, Department of Justice agents, policemen and other limbs of the law.

The proceedings that culminated in the conviction of Corcoran and Levenson, began yesterday, when the trial of William J. Corcoran, former District Attorney of Middlesex County, was resumed in the St. Louis County Court, presided over by Judge W. H. Whitman.

Corcoran, who is the chief defendant, was already convicted in one case and sentenced to 7 to 10 years.

Looking over evidence was given the first place by the former defendant of Corcoran, in the duties assigned him, and in some matters, he said he talked with certain witnesses.

One of these witnesses, David Steneman, he declared, "tried to talk to me."

POPE URGES CHRISTENDOM TO COME BACK TO ROME

In Bull Proclaiming a Holy Year, He Says the Faithful Should Show Modesty in Expressions, Manners and Especially in Clothes.

Rome, May 28.—(Herald-Examiner.)—The Pope issued yesterday, addressed to the "Pious Rulers, Servants of God, and All the Faithful," a bull in which he declares 1934 a holy year. He calls upon all to celebrate the "twenty-second jubilee."

The bull constitutes a long invitation to the faithful to restore human society and return to holy customs. The pontiff prays fervently that all non-Catholics should seek refuge in the true church of Jesus Christ and also that conditions in Palestine may be ordered and arranged in the way demanded by the rights of the Catholic religion.

"In the perfection of the charity," the pontiff says, "we desire that the churches, which through age-long and deplorable differences keep far from the Roman church, be joined to us. Nothing that could happen would be dearer or more pleasing to us than that, if not collectively, many at least, from each of these churches, should embrace the one and only fold of Christ on this occasion of great jubilee. We would embrace them with special affection, numbering them among our dearest sons."

Continuing, the pontiff says the jubilee will be an occasion when he and all the faithful should associate things of God.

"I speak of peace," says the pontiff, "not of peace written on treaties, but peace written on hearts, which must be restored among peoples. Though today it is not as distant as in the past, it will be more remote than all of us desire. At the tomb of the apostles I implore this precious boon—that Christ the Prince of Peace, who with a sign calmed the waves of the Galilean Sea, moved with pity for His own, should be the cause of peace, by which Europe is being beaten down be calmed, in order that a durable peace and charity, too long forgotten, should again be embraced by the peoples and inspire Governments."

The Pope adjured the faithful men and women to refrain from profane distraction and to adopt a spirit of penitence. He said they should show modesty of expressions and in manners, and above all, in clothes, and should again seek during the holy year exaltation in the interests of their souls.

pered with certain jurors. This evidence caused the Court to declare a mistrial again.

The effort to secure a conviction before a Middlesex County jury was made after conferences had been held between prosecuting officers of both Suffolk and Middlesex counties.

Removed From Office.

The case was heard in Supreme Court and resulted in the removal of Tufts from office as an unsuitable person. Then followed similar proceedings against Joseph C. Pelletier, District Attorney of Suffolk County, with similar results. The disbarment of Tufts, Pelletier and Daniel H. Coakley, who had held public office but was said to be the moving force of the group, resulted from subsequent action undertaken at the instance of the Boston and Middlesex County Bar associations.

A maze of episodes, including the notorious Mishawum Manor affair, in which movie magnates were said to have been "shaken down," and situations involving moneyed men, some of them prominent families, entered into the removal and disbarment proceedings, and the grand jury deliberations that culminated in the many indictments against Corcoran and a considerable group of his alleged associates.

Last October Corcoran and an array of other defendants went on trial in Superior Court of Suffolk County on 26 indictments containing more than 100 counts alleging conspiracy to extort. An injury to Judge Quinn, resulting from a fall made him unable to continue with the cases and Judge McLaughlin, who was assigned, declared a mistrial.

In January, Corcoran and Harry E. Levenson went on trial before a jury in Judge McLaughlin's court on a group of indictments charging conspiracy. Corcoran and Levenson were found guilty and sentenced to from seven to ten years in prison. Various motions for a new trial have all been denied. An appeal from the verdict on points of law is now before the State Supreme Court.

He asserted his cross-examiner, Daniel H. Coakley, that he would be pleased to go to jail with him, adding, "and Corcoran also."

He told of hearing that Coakley had sent men to the Federal Court to "frame" them. Somebody had sent a man named Gallagher into the office of the United States Attorney, he said, and since that time the office had been crooked.

He said he had told Assistant District Attorney Rushell of Middlesex County that "Gallagher and Shea seemed to control the liquor situation in the Federal Court, and expressed doubt that ex-Judge Robert O. Harris is in control there."

The second week of the trial closed with adjournment over the holiday and week-end.

Levenson's explanations of helping the prosecuting authorities was given late yesterday, as throughout the day, he was undergoing cross-examination at Coakley's hands.

STRUCK BY ONE AUTO, RUN OVER BY ANOTHER; DIES

William Meyer of Maplewood Fatally Hurt in Dual Accident in That Suburb.

William Meyer, 46 years old, of 3715 Oxford avenue, Maplewood, was internally injured at 4:30 p. m. yesterday, when struck by one automobile and run over by another at Greenwood boulevard and Sutton avenue, in Maplewood. He died three hours later at his home.

The driver of the two cars—Frederick J. Quick, an attorney, of 381 Baker avenue, Webster Groves, and Carl P. Dimmitt, salesman, of 4155 Castleman avenue, St. Louis—were both charged with manslaughter.

The Pope adjured the faithful men and women to refrain from profane distraction and to adopt a spirit of penitence. He said they should show modesty of expressions and in manners, and above all, in clothes, and should again seek during the holy year exaltation in the interests of their souls.

RECEIVERSHIP SUIT AGAINST PIERCE OIL TO BE DROPPED

Mrs. Mabel C. Priest Files Petition in Federal Court Asking for Action.

Recent proceedings instituted several weeks ago by Mrs. Mabel C. Priest, wife of former Judge Henry S. Priest, against the Pierce Oil Corporation, of which Mrs. Priest is a stockholder, were dropped yesterday when a stipulation was filed in the United States District Court dismissing the suit.

A similar stipulation, dismissing the suit of Judge Priest against the Pierce Oil Corporation, of which Mrs. Priest is a stockholder, were dropped yesterday when a stipulation was filed in the United States District Court dismissing the suit.

While declining to discuss the details of the basis for settlement of the litigation between the Priests and the Pierce company, attorneys said the full amount of Priest's claim had been paid and that there would be no further litigation over the matter.

At the time of the filing of Mrs. Priest's petition asking for a receivership and charging fraudulent manipulation of the stock of the company by certain of its officers to gain control of the corporation, of which in New York said this was a "spite" suit, it followed the institution of the suit of Priest for fees and a decision of the Virginia courts ousting Priest from the position of counsel for the corporation. The Pierce company is a Virginia corporation.

Thomas W. White, of local counsel for the corporation, said today the plans for reorganization of the company had not been delayed by the filing of the receivership suit and that they would go forward as originally intended. The plan of reorganization, previously published, contemplated the renaming of the company the Pierce Petroleum Corporation, the issuance of 2,500,000 shares of stock of no par value and the taking up of debenture indebtedness of more than $2,000,000. The Pierce company is a $15,000,000 corporation.

COLLEGE GIRL FLEES WITH MAN IN AUTO

Margaret Gregg, 16 Years Old, Escapes From Dean and Has Not Been Heard From.

Margaret Gregg, 16 years old, a student of Hardin College, at Mexico, Mo., broke away from the grasp of Miss C. H. Adams, dean of the college, on the night of May 17, jumped into an automobile waiting nearby for her, in which a man was seated, and drove away. Neither the girl's mother, Mrs. Madge L. Gregg, 1241 Hamilton avenue, nor the authorities of the college, have heard anything of her since.

At the time of her departure she was supposed to be in the parlor of one of the dormitories, where a young man was waiting for her. Dean Adams at about the same time received a telephone call from a grocery near the college campus, informing her that Miss Gregg had left a grip there. Miss Adams hurried to the store, saw the girl about to get her luggage and attempted to stop her, but was unsuccessful.

The police of St. Louis and various other cities in the State have been asked to look for the girl. No description of the car in which she fled or of its driver was obtained. Margaret is said to have told other students that she had been offered a part in a show playing at Kansas City, but her mother does not believe she accepted the offer.

Miss Gregg is described as being about 5 feet 6 inches in height, slender, having dark brown bobbed hair and dark brown eyes. When she fled from Dean Adams' grasp, and was compelled to leave her luggage behind, she was dressed in a brown dress, tan cape and black hat.

Last November, Mrs. Gregg introduced a petition in Circuit Court, asking that the girl's father, Walter Gregg, from whom the mother is divorced, be restrained from visiting the girl one day a week, as was specified at the time of the divorce. Gregg filed a counter petition asking that he be given full charge of his daughter. Both motions were overruled, and Miss Gregg matriculated at Hardin College soon after.

KANSAS G. O. P. TO DEMAND PARTY LOYALTY IN CONGRESS

State Convention to Be Held to Call Senator Capper and Others to Account.

TOPEKA, Kan., May 21.—A mass State Republican convention has been called for June 14 here by citizens of Topeka and other sections of Kansas as the result of a mass meeting held here Thursday. The purpose of the convention is to instill into the minds of the State's representatives in Congress the necessity of party loyalty. James A. Troutman, formerly Lieutenant-Governor and State Senator, presided. The meeting was called to order by Troutman, who introduced Tom Harley of Lawrence.

"Some of the Republican members of Congress have been playing horse for two years," he said. "It is high time we stopped this. President Coolidge announced months ago where he stood on the issue of the Republic of this country almost unanimously endorsed his stand and instructed their delegations for him. Yet there were some Republicans who voted against him on bonus."

There was no mention at the meeting of any candidate against Senator Capper for the senatorial nomination. The Senator was criticized, however, by all the speakers because of his vote to override the veto of the house and his vote against the President's policies on other occasions. It also was charged he had failed to submit to party discipline; failed to give loyalty to his party, but has aligned himself with a bloc that preferred class legislation rather than standing by the principles of the Republican party.

HAIR FELL OUT FROM ECZEMA

In Little Water Blisters. Cuticura Healed.

"Eczema broke out on my scalp in little water blisters. It itched badly causing me to scratch, and then it would burn like fire. I could hardly stand it at times. My hair began falling out, and became very dry and thin. The trouble lasted about six months. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after using three boxes of Cuticura Soap and three boxes of Cuticura Ointment I was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. Cora B. ## CHAPTER THIRTY-EIGHT

"GIVE me a memorandum of that," Corey said, "and send a carbon to Mr. Kippa." He turned to the young man. "We'll talk it over, and let you know just as soon as we hear from you." Devlin rose. The men shook hands as Jeannette passed into her own room. She heard them saying goodby. Their voices continued murmuring, but she did not listen. Suddenly Mr. Corey opened her door.

"Mr. Devlin wants to speak to you a minute, Miss Sturgis," he nodded to his companion, said "Well, goodbye; hope we can get together on this," and shook hands once more, and left Devlin confronting her.

"Please let me say just one word," he said quickly. "I met Mr. Corey at the Quoin Club the other day and made a date for lunch. I'm after his business all right, and think I've got it clinched. I don't want you to continue to be sore at me, if my outfit and yours are going to do business together. I'm sorry if I got off on the wrong foot. Please accept my apology and let's be friends."

"I don't think there is any occasion—" began Jeannette icily.

"Aw, shucks!" he said interrupting her. "I'm doing the best I can to square myself. I didn't mean to annoy you. I didn't care at first what you thought of me as long as I got into see Mr. Corey. I confess I thought maybe I could jolly you into arranging a date for me to see him. No—wait a minute," he urged as the girl frowned. "hear me out. You see, I'm being honest about it. I'm telling you frankly what I thought at first, but that was before I even saw you. I had no idea you were the kind of girl you are. It isn't usual to find a person like you in an office. Oh, you think I'm jollying you! I swear I'm not. I just want to ask you to forgive me if I offended you, and be friends."

There was something unusually ingratiating about this man. Jeannette hesitated, and Devlin continued. He pleaded very earnestly; it was impossible not to believe his sincerity.

Jeannette shrugged her shoulders when he paused for a moment. Her hands were automatically arranging the articles on her desk.

"Well," she conceded slowly, "what do you want?"

"For you to say you'll forgive a blundering Irish boobie, and shake hands with him."

He wrung a dry smile from her at that. She held out her hand. "Oh, very well. It's easier to be friends with you than have you here interfering with my getting at my work."

"That's fine, now," he held her fingers a moment, his whole face beaming. "You've a kind heart, Miss Sturgis, and I shan't forget it."

He took himself away with a radiant smile upon his face.

It was evident Martin Devlin proposed to be a factor in her life. When he came to the office to see Mr. Kippa or Miss Holland about the engraving—and the work brought him, or he pretended it brought him, two or three times a week—he never failed to stop to Jeannette's door, open it, and give her the benefit of his flashing teeth and handsome eyes as he wished her good-day or asked her how she was. He did not intrude further. His visits were only for a minute or two. Only once when she was looking for a letter in the filing cabinet, he came in and lingered for a chat. He saw she was not typing, therefore ready to talk to him since he was not interrupting her. When she went to lunch with Beatrice Alexander a week or two later at Wanamaker's he joined the two girls by the elevators as they were leaving the lunch-room, pretending, Jeannette noticed, with a great air of surprise, that the meeting was merely a fortuitous circumstance. The subway had a few days before begun to operate. Jeannette had never ridden upon it, so Martin piloted her down the stone steps, boarded the train, and rode with her until they reached Thirty-fourth street. Beatrice Alexander had said goodbye as they left Wanamaker's.

Devlin had a confident, self-assured way with him. It could not be said he was swaggering, but the word suggested him. He was easy, good-natured, laughing, cajoling, irresistibly merry. His good humor was contagious. Men smiled back at him; women looked at him twice. To the subway guard, to the sour-faced little Jew at the newsstand, to the burly cop with whom they collided as they climbed the stairs to the street, he was familiar, patronizing, jocular. He called the Italian subway guard "Garibaldi," the Jewish newsdealer "Isaac," the burly policeman "Sergeant." One glance at him and each was won; it was impossible to resent his familiarity. Everybody liked him; he could say the most outrageous things and give no offense. It was that Irish charm of his, Jeannette decided, back once more at her desk and clicking away at her machine, that made people so lenient with him.

She began to speculate about him a good deal. It was clear he was in hot pursuit of her, and that he intended to give her no peace. He commenced to bring little boxes of candy which he slid on to her desk with a long arm when he opened her office door to say "Hello!" Then flowers put in their appearance: sweet bunches of violets, swathed in ciled paper, their stems wrapped in purple tinfoil, the fragrant ball glistening with brilliant drops of water; there were bunches of baby roses, too, and lilacs-of-the-valley, and daffodils. One day she happened to mention she had never read "The Taming of the Shrew," and the following morning there was delivered at her home a complete set of the Temple edition of Shakespeare's plays. She protested, she threatened to throw the flowers out of the window, she begged him with her most earnest smile not to send her anything more. She was talking into deaf ears. The very next day she found on her desk two seats for a Saturday matinee with a note scribbled on the envelope: "For you and your mother next Saturday. Have a good time and think of Martin."

In deep distress she told her mother about him, but Mrs. Sturgis shared none of her concern.

"Well, perhaps the young man is trying to be friends with you in the only way he knows how. I wouldn't be too hasty with him, dearie. You say he's with an engraving company? Is that a good line of work? Does he seem well-off—plenty of money and all that?"

"Oh, Mama!" cried Jeannette, in mild annoyance.

"There's no harm, my dear, in a nice rich young fellow admiring a pretty girl like my daughter. If the young man's well brought up and means what's perfectly right and proper, I don't see what you can object to. You've got to marry one of these days, love; you must remember that. There's isn't any sense in tying yourself down to a desk for the rest of your life! You've got to think about a husband!"

"Well, I don't want him!"

"Perhaps not. I'm not saying anything about him. But there's plenty of nice young men in the world, and you mustn't shut your eyes to them. A girl should marry and have a home of her own; that's what God intended. Doctor Pittgibbons was saying exactly that same thing to me only yesterday. Now this Mr. Devlin—it's an Irish name, isn't it?"

"Oh, hush,—for goodness' sake, Mama! Don't let's talk any more about him. . . . What did Alice have to say today?"

"She's really gaining very rapidly now," Mrs. Sturgis said instantly diverted. "She says she's going to let that woman go. She comes every day and does all the dishes and cleans up and it only costs Alice three dollars a week."

Safety in Numbers

She's just playing safe—the popular girl who's the focus of every man's adoration. Being loved by all is better than being loved by one—at least, it's safer. There isn't the great danger of her falling in love herself, you see. She'd much rather distribute her affection than risk the chance of concentrating it—that would never do!

She loves all—and yet loves none. And the strangest part of it all is that every man thinks he has her heart, but there isn't one who has. That heart of hers is kept under lock and key far out of every man's reach—for a while. But some day, it may unlock itself. Hearts do, you know!—STELLA THORNE.

BIG BROTHER TO A BAD BOY

By Wm. A. McKeever

IN St. Louis 113 of the members of a men's club have adopted a boy for his pal, and 89 per cent of the boys so taken in were reported as more or less delinquent. Now here is another idea worth broadcasting.

It is friendship, trust and inspiration which will do more to direct boys into channels of usefulness and honesty than all the scolding and criticism ever attempted. The Boy Scouts do not memorize the watchwords and maxims expressive of these ideals, so that the very words ring true and clear in the daily consciousness.

Clear, inspiring ideals of performance and of service will gradually transform a so-called delinquent boy into a self-reliant moral youth. No matter how much sin and crime may be perpetrated around him, if a boy goes about his daily duties "bearing witness from within" in the utterance of such statements as "Mr. So-and-So trusts me," I am faithful to my promise," "It is easy to do right," "There is happiness in doing my work well," "I will do some kind act every day," the boy whose secret thought goes into the habit of running true, is destined to become trustworthy. A divine, inviolable law of the mind will soon make him so.

A valuable point to be noticed in the Big Brothering of boys is that of picking up one who is more or less detached from friends and family and who is bordering on delinquency, if not already gone over the road of immorality. This class will respond to brotherliness quicker if there is any difference, than will the reputed good boy.

Let the money cost of being a "Big Brother" be very little. Avoid the weakening practice of giving a youth something for

How to Make Pure Olive Oil Help You to New Hair Beauty

By LUCREZIA BORI
The Famous Spanish Prima Donna

THE care of the hair has truly become a more important consideration than it ever was. And this despite the prevalence of short tresses.

The woman who appreciates the true American type of beauty and strives to attain it, realizes that she must possess glossy hair which fairly glimmers with health and beauty. Its lovely sheen bespeaks the condition of her scalp, and the brisk circulation of the blood in her scalp is only possible when her general system is in a good, healthy condition.

This holds true whether your hair is long or short. And since there have been so many bobbed heads, it seems to me the average well-cared-for scalp must have decidedly increased. Instead of the carefully arranged, unglossy curls, which so many women possessed, we see bobbed heads on which the hair fairly stands out with health and strength.

The busy woman who used to spend much time and patience arranging her coiffure so it would stay up neatly all during the day, now needs to spend only a negligible amount of time running a comb through her bobbed hair. She can spend that extra time she might use arranging her coiffure in massaging her scalp to stir up the circulation and improve the beauty of her hair.

Of course, bobbed hair is a matter of choice and becomingness. Despite the fact that certain British scientists have come out with the report that girls with unbobbed hair produce an average silhouette which lacks charm and looks a trifle matronly, there are many, many women who look in-initely better with long hair than with short.

If you come in this class, and know it, don't sacrifice your long tresses just to become a slave to the fashion. For we also have the information that followers of fashion in Paris are all deserting the bob-haired vogue for longer hair, which is pulled smoothly down at either side of the face and rolled into a small knot at the back.

And now I'm going to give you a treatment which will be good for hair of any length, if it appears a trifle dead and lack-luster, and needs a little brightening up.

In the first place, if your hair is long and straight, it will do more good than harm to have a few inches trimmed off. This will bring the uneven hair to an even length, and shorter hair is much easier to arrange in the mode of the present day than long hair. Then nature has less length of hair to feed, and can strengthen its growth accordingly.

The treatment I want to suggest to you is a hot olive oil shampoo. All you need is a small amount of pure olive oil. Heat this, part your hair, first in the middle and then in subdivisions off this middle part, and rub the oil thoroughly in.

Allow it to remain for half an hour, then shampoo your hair. If your hair is inclined to be oily, don't feel that this treatment will add to its supply of oil. It is only weak glands which give an over-supply of oil. This treatment acts as a physic for your scalp. You should repeat the treatment every three weeks for awhile. Rinse the oil out thoroughly, and you'll find a decided improvement in your locks.

HELPS FOR THE MOTHER

By EMILIE HOFFMAN.

BEDTIME stories have become an established custom and where these are wisely selected they afford an admirable transition from activity to sleep.

A mother, in telling that she reads a few stories to her 3-year-old daughter at bedtime, remarked: "She just loves to hear them and is so intensely interested that she cries when I read pathetic tales. She gets so excited over some stories that she is trembling when I tell her good night." The mother related this as a commendatory characteristic in her child. She does not realize that she has a sensitive and sympathetic child to deal with and the bedtime stories should be of a quiet nature.

Another mother was greatly perplexed when she always found her 5-year-old son huddled near the bottom of the bed with the bed coverings tightly tucked in over his head. It was several months before she discovered, to her great surprise, that the stories of adventure in which the lad had seemed so keenly interested had aroused a feeling of fear because he was an extremely nervous child.

Another little fellow would lie awake until 3 o'clock and sometimes later. If the mother came into the room he would ask some questions about the story read that evening. Being a wise mother, this woman understood that her child lived the stories and therefore all exciting tales were excluded from the bedtime list.

The same child would enjoy these stories during the day without any disturbing influence, but for the night ghost stories certain fairy

MEDITATION OF A MARRIED WOMAN

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE "CUTE."

TO win a man's undying gratitude, tell him that he has outshined. He would almost rather LOOK like a celebrity than BE one.

But never waste time trying to make a woman happy by her that she looks anything but "cute." Or, course, "ravishing" will DO. But why take a detour when the straight cut to her heart and her vanity?

Secretly, or subconsciously, every woman thinks of her "cute."

She would rather be CUTE than President! Or than so gorgeous or "equal" or noble, or anything like that!

Shush! She always speaks of her frock as "my little And of her hat as "that little red tam," or "my little green

She fondly refers to her number sixes as "my little pumps," or "those little slippers I wore yesterday."

She always says, "Well, I think I'll tuck myself in bed." Or, "I guess it's time to seek my little 'dowdy-dowdy'."

"Cute!" That's what!

No matter if she is a replica of the Washington Monument's Tomb, she consoles herself with the sweet reflection, nose is cute, anyway. Or that her ankles are small. Or feet are so narrow!

When a blindly doting man calls a two-hundred pound "Little One," she doesn't even smile—or wince. She just says, "How big and brave and strong you are!"

THE largest and most complete library of strictly educational literature in America is maintained by the United States Department of Education at Washington. This library is administered by the Bureau of Educational Research and Statistics, and is open to all teachers of the United States. It contains a vast collection of books, pamphlets, and other educational materials, and is a valuable resource for all educators.

Plenty of Fat in Whole Milk

There is more than an ounce of fat (at least 2 1/2 level tablespoons) in a quart of whole milk. If the healthy child is given a quart of milk and has butter on his bread, he gets enough fat, and that which he receives is in wholesome form. It is well, therefore, the United States Department of Agriculture believes, not to give children such fatty foods as pastry, fried meats, doughnuts or rich cakes, as experience has shown that in these the fats are not in so good a form for them. If the child is constipated, the occasional use of cream or salad oil is desirable, for fat in abundance is laxative.

ECONOMIES IN THE HOME

By HANNAH WING

Authority on Matters Pertaining to Household Management.

EVERY woman who runs a household has her own pet economies and short cuts. Discoveries that she has found to save time, money, and effort. The alert minded woman is constantly studying her house to discover more of these "savvy."

Often the most obvious things have been overlooked because a habit was established and has gone unchallenged. Helpful suggestions are at hand in a neighbor's kitchen when one took the trouble to inquire if a better way of doing some time-consuming task had been discovered.

Sometimes, however, one finds someone wasting precious time and effort in savings that really cost more in the end than the article which they are intended to save. Such fallacies as wrapping the ice in newspaper to save the cost of a bit of adhesive tape, or the food because it keeps the ice from cooling the refrigerator and may cause illness if baby's milk supply is not safeguarded.

Just as reminders of the sort of "savvy" that count and that one needs to check up on occasionally. Do you keep a small strainer in the sink to catch particles of food that might clog the drain? Do you keep the legs of the strainer covered with a bit of adhesive tape, so that they don't get scratched or stain the sink?

Do you use kerosene or ammonia to clean your porcelain sinks and tubs or are you scouring off the fine surface finish with strong abrasives?

Do you keep washers on the kitchen table when preparing vegetables to save constant cleaning of the table?

ECONOMIES IN THE HOME By HANNAH WING

Authority on Matters Pertaining to Household Management.

VERY woman who runs a household has her own pet economies and short cuts. Discoveries that she has made to save time, money, and space.

Often the most obvious things have been overlooked because a habit was established and has gone unchallenged. Helpful suggestions at hand in a neighbor's kitchen might be quite as useful as those of a professional.

When one took the trouble to inspect the ice box, she discovered that the ice was melting and the refrigerator was not working properly.

Sometimes, however, one finds someone wasting precious time and effort in savings that really cost more in the end than the thing which they are saving.

Such fallacies as wrapping the ice in newspaper to save the ice may accomplish that, but the food because it keeps the ice from cooling the refrigerator may cause illness if the milk supply is not safe.

Just as reminders of the sort of "savings" that count and that one needs to check up on occasionally, you keep a small strainer in the sink to catch particles of food that might clog the drain? Do you keep the legs of the strainer covered with a bit of adhesive tape or rubber so that they don't scratch or stain the sink?

Do you use kerosene or ammonia to clean your porcelain sinks and tubs or are you scouring with the fine surface finish with strong abrasives.

Do you keep washers on the faucet to stop the drip and save water bills? Do you use paper on the kitchen table when preparing vegetables to save constant cleaning of the table?

Do you line the garbage pail with old newspaper to make removal of garbage a cleaner and less disagreeable task? Do you wrap the garbage in old paper before you put it in the pail?

Do you save ends of soap in a jam jar for wash day or a dish washing solution? Have you used the sink, ironing board, kitchen table to save your back from bending, if not breaking?

Do you use a rubber scraper and scrape, stack and wash dishes regularly to save time and prevent dirt water?

Do you keep your pans and utensils near the stove where they are to be used to save steps? Do you use covers on sauce pans to save time and fuel? Do you have a utensil ready to set over the flame when you light the gas?

According to examinations made by school medical inspectors of New York State during 1922-23, 11 per cent of the children living in villages, and only 27.4 per cent those living in rural districts were physically normal.

WINIFRED BLACK Writes About Grief, Sunshine and Strawberries

WE all felt dreadful about it. Mary, the emotional, said her head ached so she couldn't see.

Isabel, the feather-headed, laughed hysterically, and Catherine-the-serious sighed and shook her head.

And we all felt as if there really wasn't much use in trying to be happy in a world where such things happen.

But the woman who has lived through a great deal said, "Excuse me," and left the room for a few minutes. In a little while she called us out to the balcony and on the balcony she had set a little tea kettle with the bright yellow cups and saucers and the funny little yellow teapot with the knobby spout and the crooked handle and there was a bowl of yellow pansies in the middle of the table and there were four yellow plates and four glass saucers and in the middle of the table was a plate heaped high with snow-white biscuits and there was a great dish of scarlet strawberries and a pitcher of yellow cream and a bowl of white sugar and the nicest fresh butter you ever tasted.

A Wondrous Transformation.

And we all sat down in the sunshine and ate strawberries and cream and hot biscuits—why, they were as light as feathers!—and drank fragrant tea and talked about the way the roses were beginning to bud and how sweet the lilacs were. And somewhere a thrush started to sing his evening song and the soft shadows began to creep over the sky, lilac and rose, and the first evening star sparkled in the sky like a lovely jewel and we were a little comforted.

And afterward the woman who has lived through much sorrow told me about it.

"I used to luxuriate in grief," she said. "I thought I couldn't help it, and when things happened that made me sad, I just revelled in being as sad as I could and I thought about it and talked about it and read sad poems and sang sad songs, but when I grew older I found that there are a good many sad things in life, and somehow if you didn't look out they over-balanced the happy things and then they began to weigh you down and I learned to take pleasure and comfort in little things.

WINIFRED BLACK

"I learned to cultivate the joy of the passing moment. 'Now we couldn't do a thing to make that tragic business that worried us all so any better the other day. Not one of us.' 'So when we had talked it all over, I just slipped away and made the biscuits and set the table. And somehow, just while I was doing it, the iron band that seemed to bind my heart so cruelly, eased a little, and by the time the table was set I felt quite normal again.

"And didn't you notice how we all cheered up—together?"

"And we needed that cheer and those at home waiting for the rest of us needed it, too—oh, yes, it's the only way to get through a time like this! Do what you can to lift the burden of the tragedy, whatever it is, and then turn your mind and your energies to something pleasant, something beautiful, or anyhow something kind of cozy and comfy.

"I'm going to eat strawberries and cream whenever I get a chance and give them to other people to eat, too, even if there is a storm brewing, and I don't quite know whether I have a big enough umbrella to protect me from the storm on my way home—or not."

So now I know why the woman who is acquainted with grief always knows how to find a smile. Now I know how she has managed to live through years of sorrow and crushing grief that would have completely annihilated most people.

If We Just Look.

There's a bit of sunshine somewhere, if we just look for it, isn't there?

Oh, yes, of course, sometimes it's a relief to go right down into the depths and have a good hard weep—and done with it!

But when you've dried your eyes and washed your face and combed your hair, my dear, whoever you are, put on a fresh little frock and set your little table in the pleasantest nook in your little house and call in your neighbors and have some strawberries and cream—and see how much better the world will look to you—and to her.

Strawberries, no, I suppose they're not the least bit of use as far as food goes, but somehow He made them, didn't He, for all that? I'm glad He did—aren't you?

FASHION FRILLS

If you take a fold of cloth, bind it around your eyebrows, tie it back across your head and let the ends flap—you have an improvised dust cap. But if you take a wide piece of moire ribbon and do the same thing, you have one of the newest hats.

Bridal stockings now are ornamented on the front from toe to knee with a vine and flower pattern, embroidered heavily with about 15 minutes. Then reduce the heat and continue the roasting, allowing 15 minutes to each pound of meat or a little longer if the cut is thick. In case gas is the fuel used and the roast is a small one, the preliminary browning can be done more economically in a frying pan over one of the top burners. Baste the roast every 15 minutes unless a covered roaster is used.

If the meat rests upon a rack a small quantity of water may be kept in the bottom of the pan to prevent the drippings from becoming too brown. The water should not come in contact with the roast. A shoulder of lamb may also be served with a sauce made by heating a half cup of chopped sweet pickle of any sort with the gravy in the pan.

Other ways of adding agreeable flavors to roast leg or shoulder of lamb are mentioned by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Roast Leg or Shoulder of Lamb

THE leg, loin and rib are the cuts of lamb or mutton best suited for roasting. See that the meat is clean, but avoid washing it. The pink skin-like layer should be removed from the surface. Place the meat in the roasting pan on a rack or use a roaster which is supported upon a rim which holds it up from contact with the bottom of the oven. Brown the surface well in a hot oven. This will probably require about 15 minutes. Then reduce the heat and continue the roasting, allowing 15 minutes to each pound of meat or a little longer if the cut is thick. In case gas is the fuel used and the roast is a small one, the preliminary browning can be done more economically in a frying pan over one of the top burners. ## Children's Bedtime Story By Thornton W. Burgess

Making a New Start

When all is done and all is said, He best succeeds who looks ahead.

—Welcome Robin.

ALL of the feathered folk have learned one very important lesson and this is to waste little time in sorrowing over things which have happened, but instead to make the best of a bad matter. For the rest of the day in which they had their eggs stolen Welcome and Mrs. Robin flew about through the Old Orchard, mournfully telling their troubles to all those whom they met. But the next morning there wasn't a sound from Welcome and Mrs. Robin. No, sir, there wasn't a sound. You would never have known from them that anything had happened. You see, it was this way:

"Welcome," said Mrs. Robin as they started out to hunt for their breakfast. "We must have a new home at once. There is no use in mourning over what has happened and cannot be helped. We'll build a new home at once, and we'll build it where Chatterer the Red Squirrel can't get at it." You see, they still blamed Chatterer for what Sammy Jay had done.

"Quite right, my dear," replied Welcome. "Quite right. It is still early in the season, and we still have plenty of time to raise a family. Have you any place in mind for that new home?"

Mrs. Robin nodded. Then she cocked her head to one side and listened. She took a step forward, struck downward quickly and dragged out a big earthworm from the ground. This she swallowed. "Come with me," said she, and led the way over to Farmer Brown's house. There was an upper window with one blind closed. Between the blind and the window there was room enough for a nest. "Weat do you think of this, my dear?" said Mrs. Robin.

Welcome Robin looked the place all over very carefully. He couldn't find any fault with it. "If it suits you, my dear, it will suit me," he said.

"Not having wings, Chatterer cannot possibly get here," said Mrs. Robin. "Blacky the Crow will not dare come so close to Farmer Brown's house, and I doubt if Sammy Jay will be bold enough to bother us. I don't believe there is a safer place in all the Great World. I do hope we won't have any trouble finding some mud. Let's go look for it right away."

She led the way and Welcome followed. You know, the Robins use mud for a foundation for their nests. How Welcome and Mrs. Robin did work. They didn't care who saw them. They felt so safe that they didn't try to keep this new nest a secret. They worked even harder than they had worked building their first nest. You see, they were in more of a hurry.

Sammy Jay and Mrs. Jay were doing the same thing. They wouldn't use again that nest which Chatterer had visited. They chose another tree some distance away, and promptly set to work on a new nest. But, unlike Welcome and Mrs. Robin, they took the greatest care that no one should discover where they were building their second nest. They were very secretive.

So it wasn't a great while before Welcome and Mrs. Robin were again happy with four beautiful eggs. And Sammy and Mrs. Jay were equally proud of the four in their nest.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

Aspirin for Flowers.

It is said that one aspirin tablet dissolved in warm water and poured in the bowl with cut flowers that are beginning to wither, will freshen the most delicate flower.

Help the Dishwasher.

When finished with dishes that have contained eggs, milk or flour, put them to soak in cold water. Dishes that have contained sugar or greasy articles should be soaked in hot water.

Inside Information.

A couple of cans of cream soup should be on the reserve shelf. Then when the dinner of leftovers seems skimpy or unexpected company selects the wrong night to drop in, that cream soup will prove very filling and form a pretty good foundation.

Hard Water.

So many of the city folks have to put up with hard water that is so full of iron that it discolors the article in which it stands. When the water pitcher becomes brown inside from this water, let milk stand in the pitcher until it turns sour. It will take away all the sediment and discoloration.

FAVORITE STORIES

By Irvin S. Cobb.

AT THE END OF THE LINE.

MRS. CARR was Irish—her first name was Honora and her husband's first name was Terence—and she had a conspicuously large family in a neighborhood where large families were the rule and not the exception.

Her twelfth had just been born. Ten days after the latest addition had arrived the mother ventured out upon her front stoop. Neighbors paused to congratulate her but for some private reason or other the good lady seemed in no mood for congratulations. For the most part she maintained a silence.

An acquaintance of a whimsical turn of mind happened along and saw her sitting there and halted.

"Good mawin', Ma'am," he hailed.

"Good mawin', Mr. Donovan," answered the matron.

"Well, I heard the news," he said, jovially, "it's quite a string of cures ye have now, Ma'am."

"Yes," she said, crisply, "but the last was was the caboom."

IT WAS COMING TO A HEAD.

A DRAMA LEAGUE in a New England city was formed for the purpose of taking itself seriously and having a chance to mix with actors; in other words, it was a regulation drama league. To make its mission clearer its members tried to have a serious address, preferably by an actor or an author, at each meeting. For the convenience of stage people these meetings did not begin until midnight.

The society learned that a well-known writer for the State was to be in town on the night of its next supper and got his written acceptance to attend. On arrival he fell in with some low-lives and fell hard. He walked into the supper room, covered by two companions a bit groggy.

In due time the president arose and felicitated the company on the treat in store and then introduced the visiting lion.

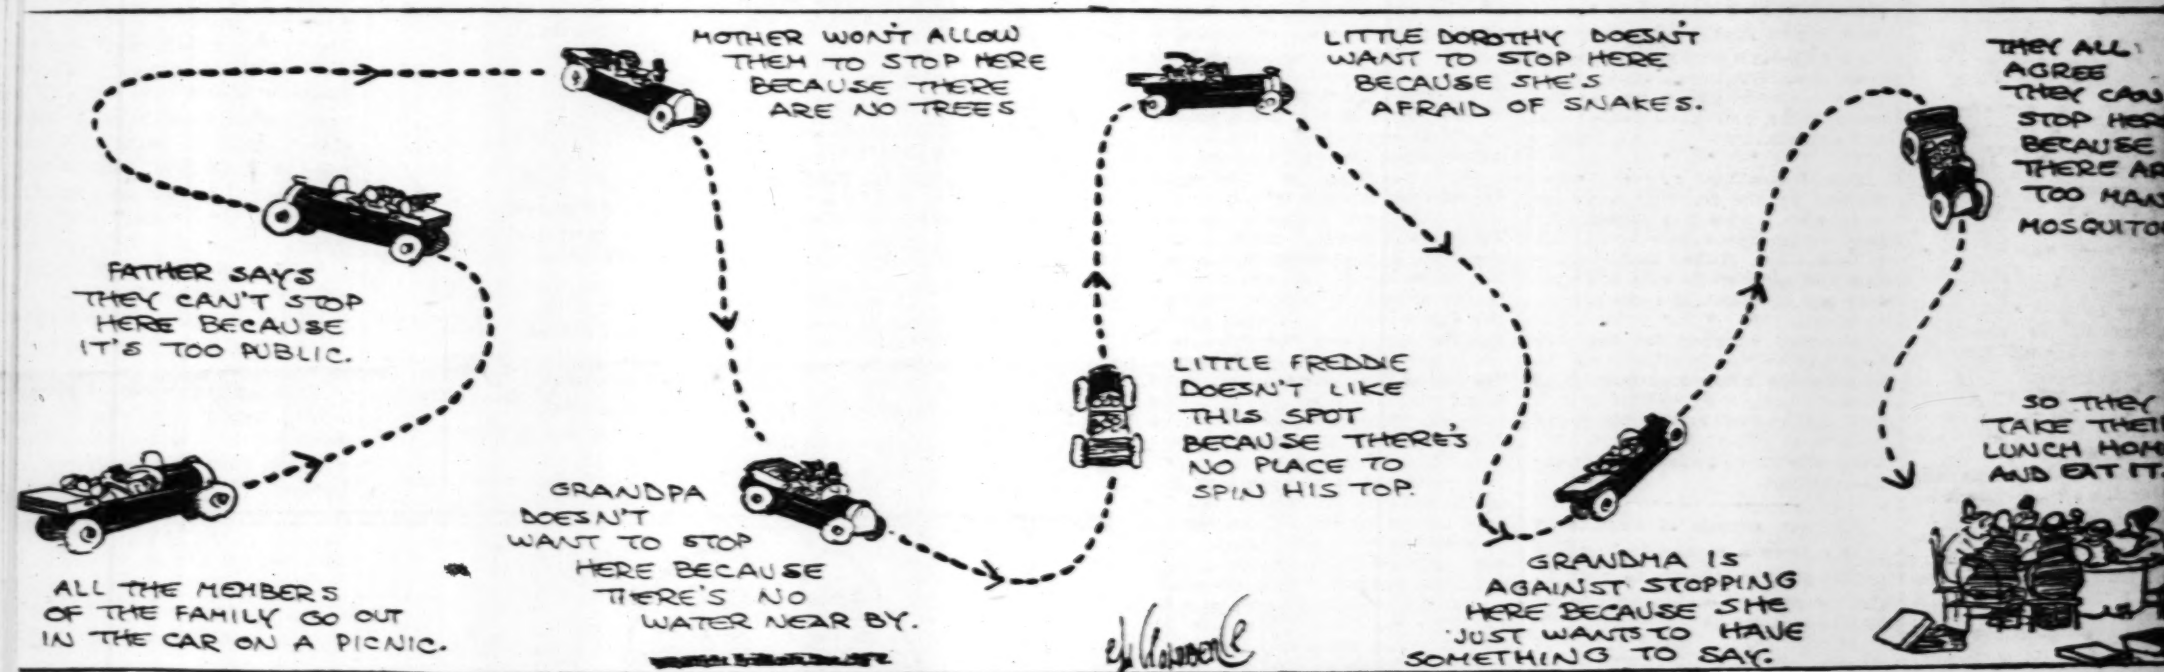

The latter surveyed the party before speaking. His complete address was as follows:

"I am told this is an Irish gathering. If that is a fact, I think it ought to be noted."

'BELIEF IN CREED' NOT A RETRACTION OF HIS BOOK, SAYS BISHOP BROWN

Taking of Testimony in Heresy Trial Closes With One Question by the Prosecution.

BISHOP BELIEVES "SYMBOLICALLY"

Arguments Concluded and Case Goes to Ecclesiastical Board, Which Takes Recess of Few Hours.

BY PAUL E. ANDERSON,
Post-Dispatch.

CLEVELAND, O., May 31.—Verdict this afternoon in the case of Bishop William Montague Brown, on trial for heresy before a canonical court of the Protestant Episcopal Church, appeared likely when court recessed at noon following the arguments of counsel. Presiding Judge Bishop Murray denied the formal defense motion for dismissal of the case and announced that the court would take its recess until 3 o'clock.

The recess followed an eloquent plea by Church Advocate Dibble "not to tell the old men and the little children of this church that the Bishop is not sure whether their prayers will be answered. Harder the court had listened to a remarkable address by defense attorney Joseph Sharts, who declared that "these you can offer to the twentieth century a religion which will bear the scrutiny of modern science you will find yourselves standing in a temple which has become the mausoleum of a dead God and a dead faith."

A verdict of guilty and the extreme penalty of deposition from the ministry is universally expected by those in attendance upon the trial.

The cross-examination of the defendant by Church Advocate Dibble consisted of precisely one question. It was as follows:

"At the close of yesterday's session, your counsel repeated the Apostles and Nicene creeds and asked if you believed them. You said you did. Did you intend then as a retraction of the statement in your book, 'Communism and Christianity'?"

"Oh, no!" exclaimed the Bishop in a pained tone. "Not a word of it. No, indeed. I retracted nothing."

Prior to this, the defendant upon taking the stand at the opening of court, had asked leave to correct an inadvertence in his testimony of the preceding day, when he made several references to "heretics." "I should have said 'my alleged heretics,'" he explained. "In my own opinion, I am not heretical. I do not want to be misunderstood as pleading guilty of heresy."

His attorney, Joseph Sharts, introduced as a part of the Bishop's testimony, a statement written by the defendant, setting out his position in detail.

Argument for Prosecution. Attorney John H. Smart, in opening the argument for the prosecution, said:

"We insist that atheistic rationalism, as Bishop Brown has described his belief, cannot be regarded as the equivalent of a belief in God. To say it is constitutes an abuse of language."

Attorney Sharts, in reply, said that "The prosecution has kept the Bible out of this trial from beginning to end." He indulged in caustic references to "the court's occasional silence on what constitutes doctrine."

Bishop Brown's Story Yesterday. His testimony brought forth the most profoundly stirring chapter of the whole memorable drama. Taking the stand in his own defense, the feeble, white-haired Bishop related the entire history of his ministry in the church, and described the events and experiences that brought him to his present state.

He began with his strenuous efforts as a young circuit missionary, and spoke of his desire to carry the story of salvation to the world. He told of lectures that earned him commendation of high churches and brought him distinction among his followers. He spoke of his consecration as Bishop of Arkansas and passed modestly over his pious and amazingly successful labors to build up the diocese there.

Assured Belief in Creed. Then came a recital of the events and the studies that first brought
